M'DONALD CALLS FOR RAPID ACTION ON DEBT REVISION

Need for Change Is Seen by World, He Asserts.

FRANCE HOLDS TALK USELESS

Claims Reich Statement Makes Reparations Parley Valueless.

(Associated Press.)

Economic measures on the part of France to meet Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's declaration of Germany's incapacity to pay reparations were suggested last night.

In London Prime Minister MacDonald said that a reparations conference at Lausanne was more necessary than ever and that he felt sure the governments concerned would face "the hard facts."

His statement was interpreted as implying that he realized a necessity for far-reaching adjustments in the Young plan.

French political factions and newspapers appeared to be solidly in support of Premier Laval, who was contemplating the formation of a "national union" government. Senator Rene Besnard told a meeting of the Radical (opposition) party at Tour that if Chancellor Bruening had been correctly quoted, Republican France should protest against what he called a violation of treaties.

Belgian Press Incensed.

Indignation was expressed by Belgian newspapers, the Independance Belge saying the stopping of Germany's payments would mean heavier taxation of Belgian and French industries to benefit German industry, which was described as being in a position to "ravish" world markets.

A German foreign office spokesman meanwhile, pointed out that Chancellor Eruening never spoke of Germans not wanting to pay reparations, but that it merely was a question "of Germany's utter impossibility to pay."

Foreign office circles indicated they felt that foreign versions of the chancellor's remarks had gone too far and professed to see in them "an attempt to torpedo" the international reparations conference tentatively called to meet in Lausanne "before the conference ever assembled."

British Cabinet May Be Called.

London, Jan. 10 (U.P.). — Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald conferred with British government leaders all day today in an attempt to frame the cabinet's policy toward Germany's declaration of inability to make reparations payments.

It was understood the cabinet was summoned to meet tomorrow to discuss the situation as outlined in the statement of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening in preparation for the Lausanne reparations conference.

MacDonald first summoned the foreign secretary, Sir. John Simon, to Chequers. Later he telephoned to Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and then met with several ministers at No. 10 Downing street.

Although the government maintained its silence regarding its reparations policy, Prime Minister MacDonald declared that the Bruening statement emphasized the need of speedy action.

Sir Josiah Stamp, prominent banker and economist, supported the prime minister. The Conservative Sunday Times said that if any war debts are wiped out "all must be wiped away." The newspaper referred to war debts owed the United States.

Seen Hampering Recovery.

"We know enough now to realize that the whole mass of interlaced

Belgian Press Hits Reparations Halt

Assails German Stoppage of Payments as Bad Faith Triumph.

Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 10 (A.P.). Great indignation was expressed by the Belgian press today in commenting on Chancellor Bruening's pronouncement regarding reparations payments.

Stopping of Germany's payments, said the Independance Belge, would mean the imposition of further taxes on Belgian and French industries to benefit German industry, which, thanks to its formidable equipment, was described as being in an excellent position to ravish world markets.

Such a move, the newspaper adds, would be a triumph for bad faith and impudence, facilitated by rivalries of allies who it said were unable to remain united in the face of an opponent as redoubtable in peace as in war.

The creditor governments already have discussed the German position, Etoile Belge declared, and none of them thinks of using force to make Germany continue to pay, nor is it contemplated to seize a pawn to enforce payment.

French Plan Vigorous Retaliation to Reich

Paris, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—France firmly intends to retaliate if Germany ceases reparations payments.

The statement of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening at Berlin, declaring Germany can not resume payments of political debts, was answered by vigorous statements in the press and in semiofficial sources disclosing several possible lines of action by France:

1. Refusal of future financial aid to Germany and pressure in other capitals to render Germany financially helpless. This would be the easiest and probably the most effective method of retaliation.

2. Invocation of economic and military sanctions against Germany, as provided by the Versailles treaty, the Young plan and The Hague agreement of January 16, 1930, permitting France to appeal to the World Court in event of breach of faith by the Reich.

3. Occupation of the Ruhr Valley by France, which is virtually out of the question in the opinion of government officials.

TWO IN STOLEN AUTO ARE KILLED IN CRASH

Both Are Unidentified After Going to Death During Wild Chase.

Two unidentified men were killed early today, when the stolen automobile in which they had evaded police in a mad chase through the Southeast section, was smashed to bits after striking a tree at Orange street near Nichols avenue southeast.

The fatal crash was the climax of a chase through Nichols avenue in which the fleeing car, going at an estimated speed of 70 miles an hour, outdistanced the pursuing patrolman, Eugene Lohr, and several taxicabs.

The mangled bodies of the men were taken from the wreckage. One of them was in the uniform of a United States Marine and the second was in civilian clothes.

A short time before the crash police received information that the blue coupe, which they were driving, had been stolen from the vicinity of Virginia avenue and Second street southwest, and was the property of Clyde A. Sherman, of 941 Virginia avenue southwest.

Patrolman Lohr, in the vicinity of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue, noticed the stolen automobile and gave chase. The machine sped toward the Anacostia Bridge. Thomas A. Redmond, of 1239 New Hampshire avenue northwest, a taxicab driver, joined the chase.

As they raced over the bridge, the speeding car nearly struck an automobile operated by Charles A. Keefe, of 424 Eleventh street southeast, who was riding with his wife, Margaret. Keefe avoided the machine and swung around to join the pursuing cars.

A few blocks past the bridge the stolen car had outdistanced the pursuers, and still speeding, attempted to turn off Nichols avenue into Orange street. This thoroughfare is a dead end street. As they swung around the corner, the car ran against a tree, uprooting it.

George McDonald, of Savannah street southeast, told police, he saw

Engineer Unhooks Train In Race to Save Fireman

Philadelphia, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Leaving a freight train of 27 cars behind, a Baltimore & Ohio engineer raced his engine a mile today in a futile effort to save the life of his fireman.

P. N. Hallman, the engineer, found H. Haas, the fireman, on the floor of the cab. He unhooked his train and sped to the nearest station, whence Mr. Haas was taken to a hospital. An operation on his skull failed to save his life. Mr. Haas, Hallman said, was injured as the train passed beneath an overhead track while he was climbing on the tender.

'32 CANDIDATES FACE ZERO HOUR IN DAKOTA TEST

Must File Their Names Before January 22 for Primary.

INDEPENDENTS AWAIT DECISION OF JOHNSON

Showdown Between Ritchie and Roosevelt Expected in Pennsylvania.

(Associated Press.)

Budding presidential candidates in the Republican and Democratic gardens will bloom or fade this week—the coming-out week for the 1932 campaign.

Whether an open campaign against the renomination of President Hoover is to be made depends, to a large extent, on a decision expected momentarily from Senator Hiram Johnson, of California.

The restless State of North Dakota, with a law requiring filing of candidacies in the presidential primary before January 22, is forcing the issue in both parties.

Senator Johnson is being urged by a combination of anti-Hoover Republicans and independents to enter not only this primary but all others.

The North Dakota call will be used by friends of Gov. Roosevelt of New York to put him formally into the contest within the next seven days.

Ritchie Strength Problematical.

Whether Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, the other avowed Democratic candidate, will test strength with Gov. Roosevelt in this Northwest agrarian area is regarded problematical.

Unless Johnson goes into the North Dakota race, Joseph I. France, a former Maryland senator, is expected to be the only likely contestant against Hoover there.

Washington is still buzzing over the unexpected decision of Charles G. Dawes to resign in the early spring as Ambassador to Great Britain. His friends do not expect Dawes to get into any primary campaign against the President, pointing to the general's deep sense of loyalty. They do understand, however, that he has very definitely cut away from the Hoover administration at a time and in a manner which gives the party notice that he will be available if wanted next June at the nominating convention.

Showdown in Prospect.

The Roosevelt boom to be set off by a call from the Democratic committee of North Dakota is to be carried forward by a move to place him in the Pennsylvania primary. In that State there is every prospect of a showdown between the New York and Maryland governors.

Roosevelt also is to go into the New Hampshire primary in March—the opening contest of the campaign. However, there is every indication the Roosevelt group will stay out of "favorite son" States, including Ohio, Missouri, Oklahoma, Maryland and Virginia.

The anti-Hoover movement in the Republican organization has very definitely come to the crossroad. Senator Norris, of Nebraska, a leader of the Western Republican Independents in opposition to the President, has declined to go into a Republican convention fight against the President.

Turns Down Request.

The veteran Norris, who bolted the Republican presidential ticket of

Buried for 144 Hours, 7 Miners Are Rescued

Bleuthen, Germany, Jan. 10 (A.P.). Given up for dead, seven of fourteen miners entombed Monday when an earthquake shook tons of dirt into a coal pit were rescued today and this tiny community was seized with hysterical joy.

Rescue workers, who have been on the job constantly for 144 hours, renewed their efforts to reach the others, who it was hoped are still living. The seven rescued today were taken to a hospital for examination.

President Opposes Army-Navy Combine

Cools Toward Proposed Consolidation of Service Offices; Prepares Messages to Congress; Would Liberalize Service on Juries.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover has prepared two special messages to Congress which he is withholding for a time, but neither has any direct reference to prohibition.

This was assured yesterday in high administrative circles.

Anxious to avoid creation of cross currents in Congress that might impede action on his emergency economic program, Mr. Hoover has set no definite date for transmitting them.

One deals with law enforcement, with no special attention to prohibition; the other contains details of the proposed wholesale reorganization of Government departments.

Determined to eliminate overlapping activities to reduce the cost of government, it was learned that the President, nevertheless, has cooled toward proposals to consolidate the Army and Navy into a single department.

In one authoritative quarter the Chief Executive's attitude was outlined as follows:

He objects, first, to the elimination of a member from his Cabinet which would be necessitated by a general Army-Navy consolidation.

He feels that two undersecretaries, one for the Army and one for the Navy, would be necessary in any single department of national defense and that it would be more difficult to attract first-class advisers to such posts than to individual seats at his Cabinet table.

He believes that the Army and Navy are, of necessity, separate entities and that comparatively little departmental machinery could be eliminated by a consolidation.

Mr. Hoover has taken no public stand of late upon Democratic pro-

ANTI-HOOVER MOVE FAILS IN CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles County Blocks Effort to Select Uninstructed Delegates.

Special to The Washington Post.

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 10.—Regular Republicans are becoming aware of a secret move recently made for the purpose of sending the California delegation to the Republican national convention without instructions to vote for the renomination of President Hoover. Upstate Republicans, said to be acting in behalf of Senator Johnson recently conferred with Chairman Fowler, of the Los Angeles County committee, and apparently induced him to enter into an anti-Hoover movement within the party.

Plans were laid for the adoption of a resolution which would have sent an uninstructed delegation to Chicago next June. Denials were made that this move was in the interest of Senator Johnson's candidacy, but Hoover regulars objected to the procedure and demanded that a meeting of the executive committee should be called immediately.

This meeting was held on December 22, but the outcome of its deliberations was not disclosed until today. A resolution was adopted enthusiastically commending President Hoover for his conduct of the Government in the midst of world difficulties. After reciting these conditions the resolution concluded:

"Whereas, Los Angeles County, stronghold of the Republican party in California, expressed its faith in the splendid citzen in 1928 with the largest vote that any county in the Nation ever gave to a presidential candidate, insuring his delegation from this State to that national convention and subsequent election of the Republican electors;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the executive committee of the Republican county central committee of Los Angeles County does hereby endorse the administration of the Nation's affairs by its present Chief Executve, Herbert Hoover, and does hereby express in his leadership of the Republican party a faith that is absolute and a trust that is complete; and

"Be it further resolved, that we pledge to Herbert Hoover the unqualified support of this committee for his renomination and reelection."

BRITAIN ASKS JAPAN TO RESTATE POLICY

Heavy Casualties Reported as Fighting Continues in Far East.

Tokyo (Monday), Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Great Britain has asked Japan to state again its policy in Manchuria in connection with the American representations which invoked the nine-power treaty and Kellogg antiwar pact, it became known today.

Whether the British request was made verbally or more formally was not announced.

A Rengo dispatch from Mukden yesterday said 20 Japanese soldiers had been killed in a fight with Chinese irregulars near Chinsi, west of Chinchow.

The dead included a colonel and four other officers of a Japanese cavalry detachment, attacked by several thousand Chinese while patroling in that vicinity. More than 20 Japanese were wounded, and the Chinese casualties were heavy.

Reinforcements sent from Chinchow to Chinsi also were attacked by Chinese, the dispatch said, and communications with Chinchow were severed. The Japanese then sent further reinforcements, including airplanes.

Hankow, China, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Three thousand Chinese guerrillas, describing themselves as Communists, captured and looted the important provincial city of Tungshan in southern Hupeh Province last Sunday, belated advices said today.

The brigands, armed with 2,000 rifles and ten machine guns, were said to have overpowered the home guard of 1,000 men and thoroughly sacked the city, including the premises of the Catholic mission. The defenders lost 100 men, but killed 500 bandits.

Peiping, China, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Stimson's recent note on the Sino-Japanese conflict was variously described in the Chinese press today as having "the head of a dragon but the tail of a rat" and as locking the door after the "thief walked off with the jewels."

On the other hand, former Foreign Minister Wellington Koo referred to the note as a "statesmanlike move characteristic of the great peace-loving nation which has been the sponsor of the antiwar pact, the founder

2,000 Cheer and Weep Here As Veteran Urges Arms Cut

Blind Philadelphian Leads 15 Speakers' Appeals for World Peace.

A crowd of 2,000 men and women, packed in the Belasco Theater for a mass meeting in the interest of disarmament, wept and cheered yesterday afternoon when a blind World War hero, one sleeve dangling at his side, told the story of how he was maimed and his five closest friends killed as they stood together on a hill in Flanders one sunny October afternoon in 1918.

Of the fifteen speakers who made eloquent appeals for world-wide reduction in arms, this single veteran stood out, probably bringing more power to the argument for peace than all statistics and other evidence available.

He is Frank A. Schrepfer, of Philadelphia, commander of the Harold D. Speakman Post of the American Legion (Narberth, Pa.) and a member of the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania.

The meeting was held under auspices of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom to bid bon voyage to Dr. Mary E. Woolley, America's sole woman delegate to the world disarmament conference at Geneva.

She appealed for patience and perseverance in awakening the responsibility of the American people to the gravity of present conditions and to the part they will have to take in the shaping of international affairs. She assured her audience that the delegation will leave for Geneva "thinking peace" and expecting something definite. She laid emphasis on the value of the delegates knowing the American people are sincerely behind them. "I regard this meeting as my godspeed," she said, "and I give you my heartfelt gratitude."

A slight disturbance was created at the end of the meeting when a reso-

ADAMS BACKS PROTECTION OF 3 AT HONOLULU

Navy Department Awaits Developments Before Deciding Next Step.

MIXED-BLOOD JURIES DECLARED APATHETIC

Cables of Sympathy Pour In to Mrs. Fortescue; Mate Seriously Ill in U. S.

(Associated Press.)

Entering for the first time the Honolulu situation involving murder charges against a young naval officer, Secretary Adams yesterday gave full approval to Rear Admiral Stirling's action in taking custody of Americans under arrest.

Meanwhile with its official reports charging Honolulu police with inability to deal with the hoodlum element, the Navy Department awaited further developments before deciding its next step.

Stirling has placed Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, New York and Washington society woman, and E. J. Lord, an enlisted man, in naval custody for safe keeping.

The three are being held for the slaying of Joseph Hahahawai, an Hawaiian, who allegedly was one of five men who criminally attacked Mrs. Massie, 20, last September.

Juries of Mixed Blood.

Navy officials were studying the case closely, especially in view of the fact that Admiral Stirling, commandant in charge of the Hawaiian naval force, reported that juries of mixed blood were apathetic in assault cases.

Full support of Massie was seen in the prompt way the department made public its official files from Stirling describing vice conditions and the attacks on more than 40 women last year. In addition, Rear Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations, said plainly "American men will not stand for the violation of their women."

Honolulu, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—While reinforced patrols of territorial police tramped the streets on the eve of a grand jury investigation, civic bodies today called a mass meeting for tomorrow night to discuss the civil government under fire as the result of the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, accused attacker of a naval officer's wife.

Ministers Make Pleas.

Many Honolulu ministers today pleaded from their pulpits against additional violence, and two members of the clergy attacked Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, for a statement on the case made in Washington.

Admiral Pratt was quoted in Washington as asserting "American men will not stand for the violation of their women." Other naval officers have charged Honolulu civil officers

Location of Akron Kept Secret to All

Scouting Force Awaiting It Knowing No More Than Naval Officials.

(Associated Press.)

Rules of the maneuvers last night kept the whereabouts of the Navy dirigible Akron a secret from naval officials as well as from the scouting force the huge airship was to contact somewhere over the Atlantic.

She was reported at 6 a. m. yesterday over Cape Lookout. Mindful that part of her job is not to disclose her position to ships and planes assigned to locate her, naval officials assumed the airship was carrying through her part of the maneuvers.

The dirigible pushed out toward the Atlantic Saturday night to contact with the scouting force somewhere south of Hampton Roads. She was ordered to spend two days in operations above the ships and return to Lakehurst.

Bills and resolutions introduced by senators and representatives before the holidays call for a total expenditure during the next five years of more than $29,000,000,000, over and above the budget.

Additional bills, not specifying amounts to be appropriated, would call for at least $5,000,000,000 more.

The Washington Post has made a compilation of bills carrying more than $1,000,000 each, and has made a conservative estimate of the amount that would be expended under each bill. No estimate can be made of the sums that would be required under certain other bills, and they are not included in the compilation. They would entail expenditure of unknown sums.

Democrats and Progressives take a heavy lead in offering bills calling for huge expenditures, although some Republicans also propose great appropriations.

No Bills Suggest Means of Raising Revenue.

None of the bills in question makes any provision for raising the revenue that is proposed to be expended.

Unless specifically stated in the bill, the sum itemized is an estimate made by The Post after careful inquiry and comparison with appropriations heretofore made.

6 District Autoists Seized In Alexandria Tag Drive

Eight automobiles bearing 1931 North Carolina license tags, one with a New York 1931 tag, and one with a Maryland tag of the vintage of 1931 are being held at Alexandria police headquarters, and the driver of each was required to post $10 collateral to obtain his freedom. Six of the drivers are District residents who have delayed getting 1932 license tags.

The Alexandria police have been furnished by the motor vehicle commissioner of Virginia with a list of the dates of expiration of automobile tags in the various States, and this list shows that the dead line for North Carolina, New York and Maryland is December 31, 1931, with no extension of time. The motor vehicle law in Virginia is reciprocal, which, in this instance, means that the laws of the respective States apply in Virginia. According to the police, the cars in question will be held until proper 1932 license tags are procured.

The names and addresses of those driving the North Carolina cars are: Franklin A. Hill, 315 S street northeast, Washington; Richard Moon, 1115 Randolph avenue, Alexandria, Va.; L. S. Pierce, R. F. D., No. 1, Alexandria; J. M. McDaniel, 416 Wolfe street Alexandria; H. G. Jordan, 3433 Fourteenth street northwest, Washington; Donald Holliday, 418 Luray place northwest, Washington; C. V. Glisson, 1931 Sixteenth street northwest, Washington, and also Goldsboro, N. C.; and G. H. Elimore, Roxboro, N. C. The Maryland license is on the car driven by Oliver W. Smith, of 328 D street northeast, Washington, and the New York license on the car of Frank A. Dickens, of the Dresden Apartments, Washington.

These cases will be heard in police court in Alexandria this morning.

PASSAGE NEAR, HOUSES SPEED FINANCE PLAN

Bill Expected to Be Sent to White House by Saturday.

BANK AID MEASURE TO BE CONSIDERED

Committees Plan to Study Tax Increase, Wheat and Other Proposals.

(Associated Press.)

Operating with unusual speed, Congress will approve President Hoover's two billion dollar reconstruction finance corporation proposal this week with the view to getting it functioning quickly.

The Senate has agreed to stay in session today until a final vote is reached. In the House general debate will begin with leaders preparing for a vote Wednesday or Thursday.

Differences between the Senate and House bills are slated to be ironed out in conference in time to send the approved measure to the White House for Mr. Hoover's signature Saturday. The President has already begun considering choice of directors to put the corporation to work.

Meanwhile Senate and House banking committees will consider the administration's latest proposal to revive the Nation's economic situation by creating a $150,000,000 depositors relief corporation to help closed national and State banks pay off depositors through loans on their free assets.

Land Bank Measure.

Responding to the President's plea to expedite action on the remainder of the economic recovery program, the Senate will take up the Federal Land Bank recapitalization bill tomorrow. As revised by the Senate banking committee, it authorizes a $125,000,000 increase in the land bank's capitalization and provides $25,000,000 for moratoriums to farmers on their loans. It already has passed through the House.

The administration bill, sponsored by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, to create a home loan discount banking system is to be considered by the Senate banking committee.

On Wednesday, the House ways and means committee will begin hearings on the administration tax increase program, with Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Mills of the Treasury heading the list of witnesses. The hearings are to be concluded January 25, and Chairman Collier said the bill would be brought to the House for consideration before February 1.

Lame Duck Resolution.

The Senate's "lame duck" resolution to eliminate the short term of Congress and to fix January 15 as the inauguration date of the President and Vice President is to be given early consideration by the House, whose Democratic leaders favor it. It will be considered by an elections committee whose chairman, Representative Rutherford, of Georgia, predicted approval.

Passed Saturday night by the House, the Democratic tariff bill will be referred to the Senate finance committee, where Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, the ranking Democrat, will urge its early report to the Senate. Favorable action there is considered probable with the aid of Republican independents although a presidential veto is almost certain. The bill strips the President of his power to change on recommendation of the Tariff Commission.

Possibility that the House judiciary committee will make some determination on the resolution of Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, to impeach Secretary Mellon, when it meets tomorrow appears likely. Chairman Sumners said the matter was too important not to be considered by the committee.

Wheat Relief Proposal.

The Senate wheat relief bill to authorize the Farm Board to turn over 40,000,000 bushels of grain to the Red Cross for needy also will be considered during the week by the House agriculture committee. Hearings on disposition of Muscle Shoals are to be completed by the House military committee.

As numerous other congressional committees turned to other problems, the new Congress looked back on an exceptional record in its brief existence as compared with previous national legislatures. The Democrats already have organized the House, approved the one-year moratorium on intergovernmental debts, passed the administration's farm land bank recapitalization bill, a deficiency appropriation bill carrying $125,000,000, appropriated $200,000,000 for the Veterans' Administration, passed their own tariff measure, and mapped out a program to accelerate a tax increase bill, the administration's economic recovery proposals and to dispose of many long-standing issues.

Arms Conference United Front Seen

France, Poland and Roumania Held Likely to Join in Making Pleas.

Warsaw, Poland, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—A united front by France, Poland and Roumania at the Geneva world disarmament conference was forecast tonight with the arrival of Rene Massigli, the French arms expert, in Warsaw to confer with the Polish authorities and Prince Dimitri Ghika, the Roumanian foreign minister.

The three also will discuss negotiations for pacts of nonaggression which each of the three nations has undertaken with Soviet Russia. Poland, France and Roumania are military allies.

The unification of the disarmament policies of the three nations would mean greater support for the French thesis of guarantees of national security by international treaties prior to disarmament. France also supports budgetary controls of arms, rather than direct control as urged by the United States. Prince Ghika said the chief purpose of his visit was to discuss the disarmament conference, although he also would take up the nonaggression negotiations.

lution was presented, urging President Hoover to instruct the delegates to take the leadership at the disarmament conference. When the vote was taken, a sprinkling of "noes" followed the loud approbation of the resolution.

Two women, both occupying boxes, rose to express the reasons for their opposition. One, Mrs. Frederic Farrington, principal of a girls' preparatory school in Chevy Chase, opined that President Hoover should not be asked to instruct the delegates until they know the intentions of the delegates from other nations.

The other opponent, Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, president of the National Patriotic Conference, complained Dr. Woolley "does not properly represent the women of America, because a large majority of the women of this country will never be willing for America to disarm while the whole of Europe is under arms."

Other Side of Question.

Referring to disarmament as a question of vital importance to "every person in this country," Mrs. Potts charged that "the other side of the question" had not been presented, adding the reminder that "there is another side." She described the organization which she heads as one standing for adequate defense and waging a campaign "against all ultrapacifistic propaganda which is seeking to undermine the institutions of our country."

Despite the objections, the resolution was adopted to the accompaniment of loud applause.

Mr. Schrepfer, the battle-scarred war hero, who also declared that "there are thousands of men in the American Legion, opposed to disarmament, who saw nothing of actual fighting," was given an ovation.

"There is no profit in war," he said in a hard, bitter voice; "there is no glory in war. In war, men die in vain." With these simple words he returned to his chair, only to rise again and salute as the cheers and whistles persisted.

As equally a stirring appearance was made by John A. Simpson, of Oklahoma City, Okla., president of the National Farmers Union, who told his audience he was speaking for the farmers of the country.

Cause of War Is Profit.

"Going into war to make the world safe for democracy is the bunk," he cried, as the large audience cheered again. "We farmers believe that every evil today can be traced back to the World War. The cause of all war is profit. Manufacturers profit during the war, and those controling finances afterwards.

"I'm a pacifist," Mr. Simpson concluded, "who wants to fight every time he sees a militist."

Mrs. Gerard Swope, of New York, opened the meeting, and Mrs. Mildred Scott Olmstead, of Philadelphia, presided. Prominent among the speakers were two Washington men, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and the Rev. Francis J. Haas, director of the National Catholic School of Social Service.

Dr. Clinchy pictured the world in the grip of "a deadly fog of fear." The sweep of a great new atmosphere is needed to disperse this poisonous fog," he said. "We are trembling on the brink of the hope that the world can be disarmed. Youth was meant for idealism, not to breathe the poisonous atmosphere age has allowed to collect."

Father Haas averred that the world is trying to follow the advice of the automobile driver who believed that to have the right of the road, he must have the largest car. "But we have learned that no nation, not even the victor, can win war," he added.

Puts Question Squarely.

The Geneva conference, he observed, puts the question squarely to the American people—"whether the world should remain in the wild West stage of shooting things out or whether it should take the next step and settle international differences through the orderly processes of law."

An appeal to the delegates to do more than labor for a reduction in arms, but also to refuse to give further assistance to war or its preparation was made by Dr. Sidney L. Goldstein, of the Free Synagogue of New York.

"If America wishes peace as much as she did liberty, she will have it," asserted Mrs. Gellhe MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Silas Strawn, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, assured the audience that for economic as well as moral and humanitarian reasons, the business men of the world earnestly hope that the Geneva conference will result in the establishment of definite means of settling international differences by peaceful methods and not by "the machinery of destruction."

Cites Chamber's Action.

Mr. Strawn cited the action of the International Chamber of Commerce and the United States Chamber as evidences of the sentiment of business men toward war. He explained how war, and its resultant debts, affect business, pointing out that the ever increasing expenses of armament must be met by taxation levied upon the people "who are already staggering under a terrific load."

Ruth Nichols, famous woman aviator, expressed confidence that the women in aviation stand ready to support Dr. Woolley and the other American delegates. She spoke of aviation as a peace-building enterprise, taking a prominent part in the daily activity of a nation's business.

Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation, declared that never before in history has such responsibility rested on men and women as on the delegates to the conference. He said he could not understand why the United States should not start the ball rolling at Geneva with an "immediate leap," such as Secretary Hughes made at the start of the naval conference in 1922. He recommended that the United States return to the policy of "being unafraid and unarmed."

Sounds Keynote.

Mrs. Ben Hooper, of Oshkosh, Wis., chairman of the international relations committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, sounded the keynote of the meeting when she declared that the delegates from this country should stay in Geneva until a drastice reduction in arms is agreed upon.

Rabbi Edward Israel, pastor of the Har Sinai Temple, Baltimore, Md., declared that the United States, as the strongest and richest Nation, should take the lead at the disarmament conference. "And there must be disarmament," he added, "and not adjustment."

Miss Katherine Devereaux Blake, member of the national board of the Women's International League, who will represent the league at Geneva, echoed the recent opinion of three prominent journalists that the war has been going on since the armistice with "the terrible methods of finance instead of murder."

"We have starvation in the midst of plenty," she observed. She expressed the opinion that the disarmament conference, if successful, will lead the way out of the financial crisis as well as end war.

$450,000 for Expenses Is Favored by Mrs. Owen

(Associated Press.)

Away from the disarmament meeting, another woman announced that if opposition to appropriating $450,000 to pay expenses of the Geneva delegation arises on the floor of the House, she will speak for the expenditure.

Holding United States participation "vastly important," Representative Ruth Bryan Owen said:

"Down underneath all the present economic questions is the fact that the great preponderance of money paid in taxation goes to pay for past wars or to prepare for future wars.

"In lightening that burden by agreemtn between nations as to curtailment of the armament program, a definite step is being taken toward the solution of the economic problems, and toward the prevention of international cataclysms which mean poverty and war."

U.S. CONTINUES MUM AS DEBT TALK FLIES

Comment Is Refused, but Moves in Europe Watched With Interest.

(Associated Press.)

Outwardly official Washington continued aloof last night on the whole question of debts and reparations, but there appeared a definite undercurrent of intense interest in Europe's discussions of the problem.

The highest administration officials—the only ones in a position to speak authoritatively on the problem—declined to comment on Chancellor Bruening's pronouncement that Germany can not pay reparations. Likewise they were silent on Prime Minister MacDonald's comment that Europe's recovery depended on the facing of "hard facts" by all governments.

The present course being followed by the administration is one of awaiting a move by Europe on the problem. Every suggestion that the United States would interfere or interpose even the most informal ideas on the problem has been immediately discounted.

The administration's attitude toward the problem is based on the contention that President Hoover in offering his one year's moratorium on intergovernmental debts in June, squarely faced this issue. Delay in general acceptance caused it to lose much of its value. Congress approved the moratorium, but declared against further revision of debt payments which the administration has repeatedly held a separate question from reparations.

Those well acquainted with the debt and reparations situation make no secret of their feeling that there will be an extension of the moratorium, if not by a direct act then by default. Such default, it is contended, would place the responsibility in the problem upon Europe.

one of the bodies thrown into the air at the first impact. The speed of the automobile threw it across the thoroughfare, where it smashed into a telegraph pole. Both men were instantly killed.

In the shoes of the man in the marine uniform the police found the name "J. Liera" printed on the side. In his pocket was a handkerchief with the initial "R," and in the inside of his trousers was the name "H. Henelson." He was about 22 years old, had blond hair, weighed about 140 pounds, and was about 5 feet 6 inches tall.

The civilian was about 25 years old, and was wearing low black shoes, a brown overcoat, brown suit and brown leather gloves. He had dark wavy hair and weighed about 150 pounds.

Neither man had any personal papers in his pockets and did not possess a driver's permit.

At the Washington Navy Yard it was said that Private J. Liera, U. S. M. C., was in the barracks at the time of the accident. H. Henelson is not known there, it was said.

Cassidy May Seek Davis' Senate Seat

Professor at Georgetown Is Considering Candidacy as Democrat.

(Associated Press.)

Louis C. Cassidy, Philadelphia lawyer, may become a Democratic candidate for the Senate from Pennsylvania. Now professor of law at Georgetown University, Mr. Cassidy said yesterday he is very much interested in the possibility of a candidacy for the seat of Senator Davis, a Republican. He said he was urged to enter the race by a number of State Democratic leaders attending the national committee meeting here Saturday.

Before reaching a decision, he intends to attend a meeting of the Democratic State committee at Harrisburg on January 14, to sound out sentiment for such a campaign. If he runs, Mr. Cassidy will make his campaign as an antiprohibitionist, standing on the repeal platform of the State committee, adopted in 1930.

12,000 INDIANS TAKE CAPTIVES OF POLICE

28 Are Injured at Another Point When British Charge Meeting.

Bombay, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Two disturbances, in one of which a crowd estimated at 12,000 persons rescued three prisoners from a police station, were reported today in India's forbidden struggle against British authority.

Police charged a crowd at Karachi with staves after a public meeting which had been declared unlawful and 28 persons were injured. The other occurrence was at Spinigar, where an armed crowd attacked the police station and rescued three prisoners charged with attempted arson.

They were the only disorders reported and the relative calm that hung over the country was interpreted by observers in two ways.

The more pessimistic said it was "The calm before the storm," which might break loose at any moment. Others among the British community interpreted it as a justification of the government's "firm hand" policy. With the arrest of leaders in the Indian National Congress movement, they said, the movement appeared to be subdued and work along the lines laid down by the recent round-table conference at London could proceed with some approximation of peace.

The British government's intention, as outlined by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at the end of the round-table conference, is to "lead India" to a position where she could make herself responsible for her own government.

Mahatma Gandhi, who is in jail at Yeroda, near Poona, and other National Congress leaders arrested in the British effort to block a resumption of civil disobedience and other anti-British manifestations, have contended for full independence.

Plot to Cheat Aliens Bared at Ellis Island

New York, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—A plot to defraud aliens by racketeers posing as immigration inspectors and wearing counterfeit badges, was disclosed today by Edward Corsi, commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island. He said he was directing a campaign to stop it.

BOGUS STOCK PLANT HUNTED BY SLEUTHS

Eight Men Held in New York; $5,000,000 in Spurious Certificates Issued.

New York, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—After striking a new blow at a ring described as an offshoot of "Lupo the Wolf's" notorious counterfeiting gang of a decade ago, police and Wall street's crack sleuths concentrated today on a hunt for a printing plant they said flooded the country with $5,000,000 in bogus stock.

The arrest of six additional men on forgery charges was announced by police, bringing the total to eight, but authorities want the presses, plates and tools with which the certificates were manufactured so cleverly that only a microscope betrayed their worthlessness. Officials were determintde to take no chance that any members of the gang still free should start operations again.

Trapped by policemen who posed as shady brokers and spent large sums making the bait during, all eight men are alleged to have signed confessions. Police smiled when the accused men listed their occupations respectively as a broker, publisher, stevedore, salesman, restaurateur, tailor, head waiter and bootlegger.

Although the stock, much of it simulating General Motors securities, appeared in brokers' offices all over the country, the men are accused specifically of negotiating a loan for $50,000 from Cusick, Kent & Co., lower Broadway brokers, on $80,000 in bogus stock.

Among the spurious certificates distributed was counterfeit Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Co. stock. Police revealed that Walter Pruzon, 50, a Fifth avenue broker, who committed suicide January 4, had been arrested a short time before on a charge of passing 100 forged shares of this concern's stock.

Salvatore Giordano, 46, who said he was a restaurateur, was described as the kingpin of the plot. Police said he had served five years in Atlanta for counterfeiting $5 bills. After finding liquor labels in his home, they suspected he added to his income by giving bootleggers a helping hand.

The labels were as cleverly manufactured as the stock certificates.

Senate to Resume Foreign Bond Quiz

More U. S. Financiers Are Called to Testify on Dealings.

(Associated Press.)

Further information on practices of American financiers in dealing with the Latin-American governments is expected to be brought to light when the Senate finance committee resumes its investigation early this week.

A representative of the F. J. Lisman Co., New York bond house, will appear before the committee to explain that company's part in the series of loans to the Peruvian government through which Juan Leguia, son of the deposed president, reportedly enriched himself by $415,000.

These payments to Jaun were called "bribes" by Senator Johnson, of California, who is taking a leading part in the investigation.

Diplomatic envoys of Peru, Colombia, Costa Rica and other countries figuring in the inquiry, while preserving an official silence, have been sending to their governments daily reports of the investigation. In the case of Peru, testimony given here will form an important part of the evidence with which the offending officials will be confronted when brought to trial.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, another leader of the Western Republican Independents, also has been much discussed as a presidential candidate and has been urged to get into the race. He, too, is balking.

Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, has been talking a lot with the Senate Republican Independents and they have been weighing him as a candidate, but there are indications that he has not been called into the Northwestern States.

No Doubt of Break.

There is no doubt at the Capital after Saturday's meeting of the Democratic national committee of a very definite break between the forces of Gov. Roosevelt and the party organization headed by Chairman Raskob and Alfred E. Smith.

Mr. Raskob's firm, unequivocal denial of a newspaper story speaking of a "Smith-Raskob-Shouse" machine in opposition to Roosevelt was accepted. It was also understood, though, that Raskob was speaking to the Roosevelt group when he referred to this "propaganda."

If the enigmatical Alfred E. Smith stands out against the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt it is believed he will have considerable influence, whether or not he actually enters the campaign himself.

Meanwhile, the names of Newton D. Baker, of Ohio; James A. Reed, of Missouri; James M. Cox, of Ohio, and Gov. Murray of Oklahoma bob up constantly in the Democratic speculation.

M'DONALD CALLS FOR RAPID ACTION ON DEBTS REVISION

reparations and war debts is a formidable hindrance to recovery from the economic evils afflicting the world," the Times said. "The British policy long ago showed the right way, when the Balfour note proposed that financial obligations arising out of the war should all be sponged out.

"If the sponge is used at all, it must wipe all away. There must be no one-sided repudiation."

MacDonald's statement on the Bruening declaration was indefinite as far as policy is concerned.

"In view of economic conditions disclosed by the experts' report, and in view of internal political problems in Germany, it was not unlikely that some such declaration would be made," he said.

Says Need Is Recognized.

"The fact that it has been made before the Lausanne conference has rendered the conference all the more necessary. It would be impossible to leave things as they are.

"The present situation is the result of international agreements and an international conference therefore is necessary to deal with it."

MacDonald said he was sure all governments concerned realized that European recovery depended on facing the hard facts.

Stamp said the prime minister was "quite correct."

"If there are divergences, it is far better to face them than to let things go on," he declared.

Reaction Is Criticized.

Berlin, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Reaction abroad to Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's declaration that Germany could not pay reparations any longer was termed "an attempt to torpedo the Lausanne conference" by a foreign office spokesman today.

The foreign office emphatically insisted that the chancellor, in his recent talk with the British Ambassador and his published interview later, never spoke of Germans wanting or not wanting to pay reparations.

"Matters are entirely beyond Germany's will, and it is now merely a question of Germany's utter impossibility to pay," the spokesman said.

Foreign office circles professed to see in the London, Paris and Warsaw versions of Bruening's talk with Sir Horace Runrbold, the British envoy, "as an attempt to torpedo the Lausanne conference before the conference ever assembled."

The versions published in the three foreign capitals were looked upon here as indicating that the chancellor expressed himself to the British Ambassador more sharply than he actually did.

Solidifies French Elements.

Paris, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Chancellor Bruening's declaration that there must be an end to reparations payments appeared today to have solidified French political elements and press opinion behind Premier Laval.

At the moment when the premier is uncertain whether to replace the late Minister of War Maginot and Foreign Minister Briand or to present the collective resignation of the cabinet, the German chancellor's words apparently inclined him to the latter course in an attempt to form a national union government.

Support came to M. Laval from unexpected quarters. Senator Rene Besnard, who has no reason to be friendly, told a large radical gathering at Tours that if Chancellor Bruening had been correctly quoted all republican France should protest against what he termed violation of treaties and solemnly established conventions.

It was believed the German position would lend a new importance to the meeting of radical deputies on Tuesday to decide their future action toward Premier Laval's policies and his next government.

Hold Conference Valueless.

Parisian newspapers were unanimous in approving Finance Minister Flandin's statement that the proposed international reparations conference at Lausanne would be valueless in view of Herr Bruening's words.

The widely read political writer Pertinax said Germany's new stand was a "deplorable consequence of France's evacuation of the Rhine."

In a provincial edition of Petit Parisien the noted economist, Lucien Romer, remarked that nothing definite could be done to solve the war debts problem until the United States had elected a new President, and advised European leader to await that event.

The authoritative newspaper, Le Temps, in a leading editorial said Germany had not changed despite her Republican-Democratic label.

Bankers See Parley Assured.

Basel, Switzerland, Jan. 10 (A.P.). Chancellor Bruening's declaration on reparations payments added nothing of importance to the known facts of the problem, international banking quarters said today, and the Lausanne conference almost certainly will be held.

The governors of the central banks held their customary informal meeting this afternoon at the World Bank preliminary to the monthly meeting of the bank's directors tomorrow.

The program will be largely routine, dealing with the renewal of certain short-term credits to Germany, Austria and Hungary, and formal approval of the Young plan committee's report on Germany's capacity to pay.

WAR AND NAVY POSTS MERGER IS OPPOSED

posals to combine the two departments. He has indicated no decision on whether his objections would result in a veto should such a measure be brought to the White House.

Determined attempts already are in progress on Capitol Hill to enact a bill of this type. The House expenditures committee plans to meet Thursday to select one of three measures already introduced upon which to hold hearings.

Chairman Byrns of the House appropriations committee, Chairman Cochran of the House expenditures committee, and Representative Williamson (Republican), South Dakota, have sponsored the three major proposals, all of them along the same general lines.

Meanwhile further details of the President's law enforcement message became known, coupled with the strongest assurance from an administration spokesman that Mr. Hoover does not regard the message as the proper vehicle for dealing with prohibition.

A considerable part of the document will discuss recommendations for strengthening bankruptcy laws and procedure. The President now has before him a voluminous report on these subjects, prepared by Solicitor General Thacher, of the Justice Department. He feels strongly that bankruptcy losses have been far larger than necessary.

In the message he also will incorporate suggestions for plugging holes in the criminal appeals statutes under which new trials are obtained and for strengthening grand jury proceedings.

Mr. Hoover feels that proven criminals far too often escape justice through technicalities in the law. The United States record on this point, he believes, is far below that of other major powers.

In the matter of grand jury proceedings he will seek not only speed but also a correction of sections under which indictments are rendered worthless because of technical faults found with jurors. He is known to have in mind one case close to home, in which more than a dozen indictments by a District of Columbia grand jury were held worthless because one juror later was declared ineligible.

of the policy of the open door and of the upholding of the territorial and administrative integrity of China—politics which find their solemn confirmation in the nine-power treaty, to which Japan is likewise a party."

Paris, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Owing to difficulties in domestic policies, the foreign office said tonight, it is uncertain when France will decide whether to follow Secretary of State Stimson in a protest to Japan over Manchuria.

Any action is unlikely before Wednesday in view of the cabinet situation. Foreign Minister Briand was slightly better today, but was said to be eager to get away for a long rest as soon as his doctors will permit.

A stir was caused in political circles today by friends of M. Briand, among them Danielou Grumbach and Pierre Cot, telling reporters in lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that the foreign minister had not resigned.

They said he merely had telephoned to Premier Laval, after the death of Minister of War Andre Maginot, that if the cabinet was to be reorganized he placed his portfolio at the premier's disposal. They said the foreign minister was improved in health and would be able to resume the duties of his office.

Shanghai, Monday, Jan. 11 (U.P.). Although it was admitted the political situation is critical, leaders of the new Chinese government have not yet resigned, it was said officially today. Sun Fo, who heads the new regime in a position similar to that of premier, was in Shanghai today.

A stalemate has resulted because of the refusal of Chiang Kai-Shek, who resigned as head of the Nanking government last month, Wang Chung-Wei and Hu Han-Min, to proceed to Nanking. Efforts are being made to persuade these men—the big three—to participate in a coalition government.

PROBE BY CONGRESS LIKELY IN HONOLULU

McKellar Will Ask Inquiry; Britten Also Prepared for Resolution.

(United Press.)

A congressional investigation of conditions in Honolulu appeared likely last night.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said he would introduce a resolution in the Senate asking for an inquiry. He said his resolution might take the shape of a request for an investigation of the administration of affairs in the entire Hawaiian group of islands.

Meantime Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois, former chairman of the House naval affairs committee, said he was prepared to sponsor a resolution calling for an investigation in the event conditions in Honolulu prevented the fleet from holding maneuvers in Hawaiian waters.

"Nothing is more important than these maneuvers to the United States," Britten said. "They must not be called off, and if conditions in Honolulu threaten them we will remove those conditions. The activities of the fleet in these war games are far more important to the Nation than any local happenings, which simply must be disposed of if they interfere."

Ritchie Criticized On Lynching Case

Colored Elks Charge He Failed to Punish Mob at Salisbury.

Special to the Washington Post.

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie was severely condemned at a meeting in the Sharp Street Methodist Church tonight under auspices of the civil liberties department of the Colored Elks for inactivity after the recent lynching of Walter Williams at Salisbury. His action was contrasted with that of Gov. Connelly, of West Virginia, in a similar case, by Robert J. Nelson, colored, Elks director of civil liberties. J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler, presided.

Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman from Mississippi and grand legal adviser of colored Elks, said: "Maryland needs to get rid of Democratic control. There can be no compromise between the Democratic party and Negroes of Maryland or elsewhere. This step is essential before lynching can be effectively handled."

Nelson illustrated the impossibility of the Salisbury lynchers not being recognized by the sheriff and hospital attendants where Williams was taken by the mob.

W. C. Hueston, assistant solicitor for the Postoffice Department, said: "If we are to get our proper destiny in Maryland, Negroes must get back to the soil and protect it."

SENATOR HIRAM W. JOHNSON.

YOU get an idea of the character of Hiram Warren Johnson not only from his name but also from the way he walks. He throws his feet out and puts them down so as to cause his trousers to flap about his ankles as if they had been shaken vigorously.

Senator Johnson came out of California to the United States Senate in 1916 and has remained in the Senate since and bids fair to continue there for several years more, although there was a time, a few years back, when his political enemies believed his head was on the block and they were swinging the ax.

Before the gray-haired, ruddy-faced senator came to the Capitol, however, he was nationally known. About the time the Hiram Johnson sun rose the jokester's sun about native sons of California began to set, for the senator was born in Sacramento, Calif., on September 2, 1866, was reared and married in his home town, although in 1902 he moved to San Francisco, his present home. Not content with just being born in California and living there he attended the University of California, from which he was graduated as a lawyer.

Eight years after he moved to San Francisco he was elected governor and was reelected in 1914. He was one of the Western liberals. He was an irreconcilable in the fight over the League of Nations. He fought for Japanese exclusion.

He is a type of orator who seems never to turn a phrase for sake of turning it, but because what he says comes from a fervid soul through an astute mind. Vigorous, seemingly in the prime of life, some time he may achieve that appearance sometimes described as venerable, but now one can not conceive the stab of his forefinger bereft of vigor in the course of debate.

ADAMS BACKS NAVY'S STEPS TO PROTECT FOUR IN HAWAII

were not able to protect women from prowling gangs.

The Rev. Galen R. Weaver, pastor of the Church of the Crossroads, expressed the hope that President Hoover would "use every due process of law to see that Admiral Pratt is relieved of his command."

The Rev. Horace Leavitt, who did not name Admiral Pratt, but whose remarks were interpreted as directed at the high naval officer, scored what he termed Pratt's justification of the killing of Kahahawai.

Many Flowers Delivered.

As territorial prosecutors planned to ask the death penalty for the quartet accused of killing Kahahawai, men connected with the Army and Navy offered their assistance to the defense.

Baskets of flowers and a sheaf of radiograms were delivered to Mrs. Granville Fortescue, wife of the prominent soldier and author, who, with her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas M. Massie, U. S. N., and two enlisted men of the Navy are charged with kidnaping and killing Kahahawaie, one of the five men accused of attacking Lieut. Massie's wife last September.

Likewise there were flowers for Kahahawai and tears were shed by those grieving over his death. The chapel where his body lay was banked with blooms and visited by hundreds.

In the flower-banked funeral chapel, following Hawaiian custom, Kahahawai's parents stood at the head of his casket and wailed almost constantly.

Companions View Body.

The four youths who were tried with Kahahawai on the attack charge and held for retrial after the jury had disagreed visited the chapel and view the body of their companion today. The four, Henry Chang, Horace Ida, Ben Ahakuleo and David Takai, were left alone in the room. They wept.

Detectives accompanied the four alleged attackers from the police station, where they are being held for safe keeping, to the chapel and back.

Among the floral offerings was one from the Hui Eleu, barefoot football organization of which Kahahawai was a star player.

There was no hysteria in Honolulu to indicate that the trouble had resolved itself into a racial feud. Nervousness was exhibited in the residential district because Daniel Lyman, convicted murderer and companion of an alleged woman attacker, remained at large after escaping from Oahu Prison several days ago.

Calls for Protection.

Maj. Gordon C. Ross reported several calls from women asking protection for their homes and requests from men for neighborhood patrols.

Mrs. Fortescue, Lieut. Massie, and one of the accused enlisted men, E. J. Lord, remained in the custody of naval officers at Pearl Harbor, where they were delivered for safe keeping after Admiral Stirling had agreed to produce them in court on demand. The fourth accused person, Albert O. Jones, was held by city officials.

A threat of reprisal against the four was officially admitted.

Commenting on the approval of Secretary of the Navy Adams of the action of Rear Admiral Yates Stirling in assuming custody of three of the accused, City and County Attorney James F. Gilliland said he agreed with both Admiral Stirling and the Navy Secretary.

In Nervous Condition.

"Admiral Stirling suggested to the judge," Gilliland said, "that the defendants would be safer in the custody of the Navy.

"The admiral felt they would be safer from reprisals than if they were placed in the jocal jail.

"I feel the same way about it."

Frank Thompson, attorney for Mrs. Fortescue, went to Pearl Harbor, but said he had been unable to see his client except for a few moments because of her nervous condition. He said his client had received the radiograms from friends in the United States.

Thompson and Montgomery Winn, an associate attorney, reported Lieut. Massie had decided to waive any rights he might have and be tried by the Navy or in Federal Court. They quoted him as saying he would be willing to be tried by a jury of citizens of Honolulu, as were the men accused by Mrs. Massie. The attorneys said several prominent citizens of Honolulu had conveyed their sympathies to Mrs. Fortescue and Lieut. Massie.

From New York.

In his sermon today Mr. Leavitt, who came here recently from a New York pastorate, commented on remarks on the killing attributed to Admiral Pratt.

"A high service official in Washington," said Mr. Leavitt, "who is reported as justifying this resort to lynch law 'because the courts have failed' puts himself and the force he represents above the law, which is anarchy and utterly false to the Constitution he is sworn to uphold."

Granville Fortescue, author, war hero and correspondent, whose wife and son-in-law are charged with killing an Hawaiian accused of attacking the major's daughter, was described tonight as a "very sick man."

At the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center Hospital, where he was taken yesterday with pneumonia, it was said he was under the care of special nurses and his condition was "serious."

ROOSEVELT CONFERS WITH HOOVER ON JOB

Insular Affairs Discussed During Stroll Around New Buildings.

(Associated Press.)

An open air talk on insular affairs was had by President Hoover yesterday with the man he has just appointed Governor General of the Philippines, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt of Porto Rico.

Although Gov. Roosevelt is not a White House guest during his stay here, he went to the Executive Mansion during the afternoon to take a stroll with the President. They walked down toward some of the new Federal buildings that are rising not far from the White House.

Earlier the President, with Mrs. Hoover, who had just returned from New York, attended the Quaker services at the little gray stone Friends' Church.

Comment Is Guarded.

Manila, P. I., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—In deference to the current independence campaign being carried on at Washington, Filipino leaders today guarded comment on President Hoover's nomination of Theodore Roosevelt to be Governor General of the Philippines.

President Manuel Quezon, of the insular Senate, declined to make a statement. Roosevelt is so little known here he has been confused in the minds of the less informed with Nicholas Roosevelt, whose nomination for the vice governor generalship in 1929 proved so unpopular. At that time copies of a book written by Nicholas Rodsevelt were burned as an expression of public feeling.

The American owned daily bulletin expressed fear the appointment would mean another short term governor for the Philippines, because of Roosevelt's record and ambitions. The paper said the Philippines needs a "governor who will stay."

Excuses Resignation.

Gov. Gen. Dwight Davis was here two and one-half years, but the paper excused his resignation because he took the post at a personal sacrifice, and because of a feeling of public duty. The bulletin concludes its comment with the phrase, "Roosevelt should understand, he can not learn the job in a day and can not accomplish his task in a week."

Representative Francisco Varona, acting majority leader of the House of Representatives, said Roosevelt's nomination appeared to indicate the Administration planned no change in its relations with the Philippines.

Graves in Frozen Earth Dug for Young Brothers

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Fifteen men today dug through the half-frozen ground of the tiny McCauley Cemetery, near Ozark, Mo., to make two graves for the bodies of Harry and Jennings Young, slayers of six peace officers near here January 2.

Although the bodies of the two men, who killed themselves in Houston, Tex., rather than submit to capture, still are being kept in hiding, to avoid any possible mob violence, it was understood burials would take place after dark today. Large throngs of curious were being kept from the cemetery by Christian County officers.

One Killed, Two Hurt In Rail Boiler Blast

Moberly, Mo., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Frank Foster, 40, fireman, was killed; Engineer Luther Zeller, 55, was injured, probably fatally, and Brakeman J. C. Christy, 45, was hurt seriously in a boiler explosion on a Wabash freight train near Truesdale, Mo., early today. All three men live in Moberly.

Steam escaping after the explosion scalded Foster so seriously he died about an hour later as the three men were being taken to a St. Charles, Mo., hospital. Zeller, although alive this afternoon, was not expected to live. Christy is the less seriously hurt. The engine and four cars were derailed by the explosion.

Antennae Weight Knocks Pilot Unconscious in Air

Manila, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—The escape of two Army lieutenants from an airplane accident in midair at Nichols field, near Manila, last Thursday, was learned here today.

Lieut. Freedrick E. Glantzberg, piloting the machine, was struck and knocked unconscious by a weight trailing from a radio antenna suspended from another plane. With the machine out of control, Lieut. Alvord V. P. Anderson, jr., radio operator, jumped with his parachute. While he was landing safely, Lieut. Glantsberg recovered consciousness and righted the ship just as it was about to crash.

Inquiry Welcomed By Broadcasters

Assert They Can Show American Plan Better Than Europe's.

American broadcasters welcome any "fair and impartial" investigation of their industry, it was stated in a resolution unanimously adopted by the directors of the National Association of Broadcasters at its meeting here last night.

The resolution, which referred to the anticipated adoption by the Senate of the resolution by Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, requiring the Federal Radio Commission to investigate the feasibility of Government ownership of broadcasting stations in this country, stated that such investigation would give the broadcasters an opportunity "to demonstrate that the American plan of competitive broadcasting, in the hands of private industry is immeasurably superior to the systems prevalent in Europe." European broadcasting stations are owned or controlled by governments and are supported by taxes on receiving set owners, the resolution points out.

GOLD DOLLAR OF U.S. DECLARED UNSHAKEN

Albert H. Wiggin Sanguine on Revival in Report to Stockholders.

New York, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—The American gold dollar, the first credit of the world, stands unshaken, says Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National Bank, in his annual report to stockholders made public today.

In reviewing the rigorous readjustments of 1931, he asserted that both the volume of business and the levels of values "are capable of substantial revival with a mere change in emotional attitude." Both, he said, are "depressed by fear of the unknown far below the level justified by the facts."

Writing in Berlin, where Mr. Wiggin is representing 100 American banks having credits in Germany, the banker praised the efforts of that country to meet its obligations, and expressed the opinion that its recent payments of private credits had been excessive, and that further repayments should be so scheduled as to protect the reserves of the Reichsbank.

Bankers Are Cooperating.

Bankers are cooperating with a "protective attitude," he added.

Mr. Wiggin's report has been awaited with keen interest in financial quarters, because of the rarity of his public statements and his prominence in international finance. His urgence of a reduction of war debts as a matter "of good business" in his annual report of last year attracted wide interest.

Pointing out that the year past began with a substantial revival of confidence, Mr. Wiggin traced the series of dramatic economic developments, beginning with disappointing business results in the spring, and in May, financial difficulties in Austria, precipitating a run on Germany, followed in turn by a run on England, and in October, resulting in "an international run on the United States," and the sudden withdrawal of more than $700,000,000 from this country.

Example of Soundness.

"The steadiness with which the Federal Reserve Banks and the American banking community met this run, giving a demonstration of the soundness of our gold standard, represents a great achievement," he said.

"The American dollar is a gold dollar and the world knows this now and believes it. The first credit of the world remains unshaken. Gold has returned in very substantial volume since the end of this run, and an important step has been taken in restoring international confidence."

Mr. Wiggin laid much of the world's ills to high tariffs. Pointing out that international payments are normally made primarily by goods, he asserted the gold of the world "is abundantly adequate if imports and exports were permitted to pay for each other in a normal way.

SHIPPING IMPERILED BY GALE IN CHANNEL

Much Damage Done Along British Coast; Wales Hit by Floods.

London, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—A gale raged the length of the English Channel today and did considerable damage along the south coast of Great Britain.

Giant seas broke over the promenades at all Southern resorts and in the neighborhood of Dover roofs were smitten and trees uprooted. Lifeboats went out several times to the assistance of barges and other small craft in distress. No loss of life was reported, but there were many hairbreadth escapes.

A lifeboat from Selsey rescued nine men from the Collier Mango, near Portsmouth, before dawn, after the collier had been buffeted all night. Afterward she was swept aground.

Many vessels were forced to seek the shelter of Plymouth Harbor because of high seas. Cross-channel steamers plowed through huge waves and generally arrived late at their destinations.

A pilot boat sank off Love Harbor, Plymouth, after it collided with the returning motor vessel Bessie. The crew was saved.

Monmouth, South Wales, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Widespread floods occurred today in South Wales as a result of heavy rains accompanied by a wind of gale force.

Many families in this city took refuge in upper stories of their homes as the water rose to 4 and 5 feet in their living rooms. Some were taken from houses in small boats.

The town of Usk was isolated by a rise in the Usk River. Communications between Pontypool and Abergavenny were cut. Bus service was suspended in many places. Farmers have lost a number of cattle, sheep and pigs.

Democratic Feast Orators Named

"Victory Dinners" in 50 Cities to Start Preparedness Campaign.

New York, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Additional speakers were named today for the series of dinners to be held in more than 50 cities and towns, from coast to coast, next Thursday night to mark the public launching of the Democratic party's "preparedness drive" for the 1932 presidential campaign. Democratic leaders have given the name "victory dinners" to the gatherings.

Melvin L. Traylor, will share the platform with Jouett Shouse, national committee executive chairman, and Robert F. Carr, "victory chairman" for Illinois, at the Chicago dinner. Mayor Anton J. Cermak is honorary chairman of the arrangements committee.

Mrs. Jessie Woodrow Sayre, daughter of the late President Wilson, will join former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, and Mayor James A. Curley in addressing the dinner in Boston. William N. Rogers, newly elected Congress member from the First New Hampshire District, also will speak.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

HAVING promised the sun, moon and safe conduct, Edward N. Hurley, Chicago Democrat, who landed the Republican national convention for that city easily, but had some difficulty bagging the Democrats, threw in television as a final inducement if they would hold their convention in Chicago.

If television is used at the conventions, as it doubtless will be, it will be the first time in history, outside of a studio, excepting experimentally. The Chicago people have made good progress with their television work and are now able to televise the features of three or four persons at once with likenesses about as clear as in newspaper halftones.

Likewise Mr. Hurley did not overlook the fact that Chicago is geographically the country's greatest radio center and that sessions of conventions there could be broadcast on a scale never heretofore attempted.

A striking facial resemblance has been noted between Ralph Fox, whose orchestra broadcasts from the Lotus Restaurant, and that of the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth.

ALTHOUGH he is one of the best speakers in the Democratic party, Claude G. Bowers, toastmaster at the Jackson Day dinner in Washington, introduced the radio speakers, Al Smith, John W. Davis and former Gov. Cox, each with a single sentence. This proved Bowers' good sense and is an example for other toastmasters to follow over the radio.

Mary Garden, operatic and concert soprano, has signed a three-year contract to sing on the radio.

Four numbers will be contributed to the Voice of Firestone program by Lawrence Tibbett, barytone, tonight, "Home on the Range," prologue to "Pagliacci," "Lover, Come Back to Me," and "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise."

New York's history will be recalled in a radio pageant dedicated to the Empire State (WRC, 9:30 o'clock tonight). Included will be a tribute to the Automobile Show, which is being held in Grand Central Palace.

In the role of a favorite son typifying Manhattan today, Jerome Kern will direct the concert orchestra in a special symposium of his works, among them "Old Man River."

Radio's first original operetta, "El Caballero," a musical story of the Argentine, will have its premiere over WRC tonight. The operetta has the essential ingredients of similar stage productions, condensed to meet the requirements of a 30-minute broadcast.

THE second of a series of typical American programs, entitled "Hello, Europe!" which Columbia is transmitting to Great Britain and the Continent, will also be simultaneously heard over WMAL today, 5:15 p. m. The Mills Brothers, Morton Downey, Tony Wons, the Street Singer and Howard Barlow's symphony will be featured.

A one-man minstrel show, featuring George B. Reid, one of Washington's pioneer radio performers, will make its appearance over Station WRC three times each week, beginning tomorrow.

Reid plays all parts in the minstrel show. Howard Cooper, pianist, accompanies the act. Reid can use as many as ten different voices. Each program will consist of jokes, songs and dialect stories.

Congressional programs, vintage of 1932, will be discussed by Charles G. Ross, chief correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch in Washington, tomorrow night over the WJZ network, 8 p. m.

Real stories of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police will be given listeners in a new dramatic series, starting tonight (WJZ network, 10:30 p. m.). T. Morris Longstretch, who is believed to be the only man outside the organization ever to have been granted access to complete records, will write the continuity for the program, to be known as "With Canada's Mounted."

A MUSICAL organization new to WRC's listeners will be heard three mornings each week, at 9:15, when the Sparkling Music program is inaugurated tomorrow morning. Members of Ed Troutman's Orchestra will sing as well as play. Troutman's band has been heard through many individual stations in the neighborhood of Buffalo, Syracuse and Schenectady, but this is its first network appearance.

Another newcomer to the WRC wave length will be "Skippy," who makes his debut today. The "mystery" program—no one, not even officials of the NBC nor the sponsor, has even seen the child characters at work—will originate in Chicago.

Names of the children are being kept secret. They will not be allowed to make personal appearances, or to talk to any children who come to the studios determined to meet them.

Sketches from English revues will be presented in Piccadilly Circus, a weekly series which will bring flashes of London's Broadway to the air, beginning tonight (WJZ network, 9:30 p. m.)

TICKETS for the Seth Parker benefit performance at Constitution Hall on Friday, January 29, are on sale at 624 Indiana avenue northwest. Proceeds will be turned over to the Central Union Mission and Children's Emergency Home.

"Music That Satisfies" calls for a reunion of the four Shilkret brothers every time it goes on the air. Jack is one of the pianists in the orchestra which Nat directs. Brother Harry, who is a doctor by profession, plays the trumpet in the ensemble by way of a hobby. Lou, also a pianist, does not play during the program, but helps Nat see to it that all the musicians get to the studio in time for their nightly work.

When Joe Humphreys took part in a recent broadcast at which celebrities of the sporting world gathered to pay tribute to Vincent Richards, the famous Madison Square Garden announcer couldn't accustom himself to the fact that a microphone made shouting unnecessary. As a result they had to keep lusty-throated Joe more than 3 yards away when it came time for him to speak.

Jane Corbett Interprets the Mode

Black wool and astrakhan ensemble with unusual bodice of green crepe. (From Bernard et Cie, Paris.)

New York, Jan. 10.

HA HA! 'Tis January, and Ol' Man Winter will get his licks now if ever! Know what I just heard from Paris? That separate scarf and muffs are all the rage!

Clever M'selles! Ho hum, why didn't I think of that beffor—beffor? Because the minute I read that wee, pertinent little note in the sheaf of notes Mamzelle sent this week, my mind leaped to the obvious—that such an idea was the last word in economy cleverness.

'Case you don't follow me, there is this to consider: All the collar and cuff sets that you have gathered together for years, maybe—that you have, if you are clever, been taking off old coats and as well as suits and putting away, can be made into these scarf and muff sets; all the old fur jacquettes and coats—using the larger good pieces of a fur coat for trimming for something, and having the remaining pieces made into a scarf and muff set.

And, quite as important, consider the "assembling" aspect of this fad—how, with an ermine muff and scarf, for instance, you can be ever so elegantly and luxuriously chic in a tailored silk suit; with a black velvet afternoon coat; or with a short evening coat. A caricul scarf and muff could be worn with a woolen street dress, a tailored suit and a dress coat; a squirrel set the same. In short, if you have one or two scarf and muff sets, you can be completely furred for the entire winter and spring, and have quite a variety of outfits.

And as to the charm of the muff and scarf. Not to mention the comfort—yes, they do keep your fingers warm, these little muffs and with warm fingers you can never get blue nosed and cold.

Altogether, the scarf and muff have it as far as I am concerned, and as far as the majority of chic Parisiennes are concerned, too.

* * * *

The chemise and pantie-shorts that you can make from a yard and a quarter. That's what the new leaflet tells you about—and sh-h-h-h, the hip and bust sizes can be as much as 45 (hips) and 38 (bust). Which just proves that from a yard and a quarter of good material, which you can buy in a remnant you know—you can go a long way. But just how easily and how long, you can't really know until you have sent a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post and received back a leaflet telling you how to go about it. Remember, two pieces of lingerie from one yard and a quarter—no foolin' and no extra pieces of lace or anything, either.

* * * *

Just the kind of an ensemble that one can really use. Yet one that has sufficient individuality, enough elegance and quite enough chic to justify having it in one's wardrobe, if you see what I mean—as of course you do. Barnard et Cie, of Paris, has a way of doing just these things to an ensemble, if you have noticed—and here again one finds a typical Barnard et Cie idea expressed in the serge and crepe of the frock, the cut and trimming of the coat, and the harmony of both of them. Yes?

The Beauty Sorceress.

She says that you should not forget that dull appearing eyebrows make a face look oldish—and that a wee bit of massage every night with your skin food right on the eyebrows, and the brushing of them and shaping them with an old toothbrush dipped in cold water every morning, will keep them lovely, long, dark, shaped and young. Remember!

Au revoir!

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By ELY CULBERTSON

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

CARD READING AND CONTRACT MAKING.

CARD reading is one of the most fascinating features of the game of Contract Bridge. To be able to determine after a few rounds of play the distribution of the suits in the hands of your opponents is frequently of almost incalculable value in the making of a contract. The good player almost subconsciously early acquires the habit of mentally noting each card that is played and drawing inferences from it that will aid him in placing not only the key cards of the suit, but the entire distribution of a suit around the table. Sometimes this knowledge is of little value, but, even if it is of no importance on a particular deal, to make it a practice to note the distribution of the suits is good play, because you never can tell when a hand will turn up in which this knowledge is essential to the making of your contract.

Today's hands, played by Mr. Levis R. Ayers, of Philadelphia, is one in which an ambitious contract of six spades was only fulfilled because Mr. Ayres, who held the South hand, was able to utilize the elimination play through his knowledge of the distribution of the suits.

The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♡	4♠	Pass
5♠(1)	Pass	6♠(2)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—South, with 5 honor-tricks, is not unduly optimistic in making a Slam try.

2—North's bid for a Slam is not fully justified. His hand contains, it is true, magnificent trump support, but has in all only 1½ honor-tricks. The void in diamonds may mean only a duplication of values, and the declarer may be compelled to helplessly watch his opponents take in 2 or 3 tricks before surrendering the lead.

West opened the Queen of hearts, and Mr Ayers won with the King. He then lead a diamond, which was trumped in Dummy. He returned to his own hand with a trump and repeated this process until his hand was void of diamonds and the adverse trumps had been picked up. Now, to guard against the possibility that West had made an unsound Over-call bid, he led another round of hearts, upon which East discarded a diamond. South's chance of making the contract depended upon East holding five clubs. Therefore, Mr. Ayers now laid down the Ace and King of clubs and followed with the deuce, which East was forced to win. This was the only trick for East and West, as East's hand was now void of everything but diamonds and clubs, and the lead of either would permit a discard in one hand and a ruff in the others.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: What is the chief characteristic of honors not in sequence?

Answer: Honors not in sequence are in tenace positions and must be played with "finesse."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Mr. Culbertson will be glad to answer questions on bidding and play of hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of The Washington Post, inclosing a 2-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

When Men Are Failures.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I am worried about the man I am supposed to marry next spring. I think he is lazy, or rather lacks ambition, and I am afraid to put my future in his hands, and so would like your opinion. Why do I say he is lazy? Well, his mother calls him a dozen times each morning to get him up, and he is late for the office about once a week. Next, if he would take a course in drafting, there is a better job open to him. He has begun but dropped this course, as it was too much effort. That must have disgusted his boss, who even offered to pay for the course. The boy is very bright. But if anything is any trouble, he will pass it up. Besides, he seems to always go in for such trifling pastimes. I like to read or go to night school. He will stand for hours in one spot downtown, watching people pass by. What can anyone see in that? Honestly, Miss McDonald, when I am downtown with anyone I am ashamed to speak to him standing there with the sort that hang out on a street corner. Do you blame me?

Lately he has been a little disagreeable about all this. I want him to take this course. I want him to please the boss, and stand well with him. He as much as tells me it is none of my business. But he expects me to marry him just the same. I do not feel toward him as I did. I am not just mad. I am completely disappointed in him and I feel I do not want the sort of man he seems to be. What is your opinion?

BUSY BETH.

Well, Beth, you will be kept busy if you marry this lad. He is the type that bolts the door when opportunity knocks. The world is full of them. This offer of the boss to finance his education is just the first opportunity, but it might just as well be the last, for all will be met in the same manner. It is a shame that opportunity is so easily offended and so faint hearted. If she would only stick around, or carry an axe with her and break down a few doors, but she just takes no for an answer and finds another door.

Your boy friend may be as bright as you say. Bright as a 4-year-old is bright, or a parrot. But he is not intelligent. He is destined to end his days emptying waste paper baskets in some other man's office, like the thousands of his kind. He is going to be given a few chances, and then forgotten. He will stay in the same job and expect increases in pay on the mere strength of the fact that he has put in so many years doing the same thing. And after a while the raises will cease and he will be told that his future is behind him. Then he will tell his friends about the ungrateful boss he has.

You are an intelligent and ambitious young woman and should marry a man of at least equal ability. And you will not find such a man standing on the curb with the town morons watching people go past. Such an occupation, or rather absence of occupation, is in itself indication of a lack of gray matter under the fedora. You will find no future presidents of the United States lined up to see the girls go by. But you will find the future town failures all present.

Unless the bay agrees to develop his mental resources, advance in his line, and show more promise as a man, you are justified in reconsidering your plans in regard to marriage. For the man who passes up the good opinion of one boss will pass up the good opinion of others, and be found among the failures bemoaning the injustice of the world when he is 50. Do not be the audience when that day arrives. You deserve a better fate, and better fates do not come to the wives of failures. Find a man who opens the door wide when opportunity knocks, who even asks her to come in and have a chair. That man will become good friends with opportunity. Life is as simple as that. Reconsider!

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a. m. to 10:35 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. and from 7:50 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:40 p. m.

That life or destiny has a subtle method of concealing its purpose will be brought to notice January 11, through the events forecast for this date. A sorrow, grievance or disappointment will be apt to perplex or embitter you. Do not neglect colds or chills, as health conditions are not under favorable aspects!

The child born on this January 11 will have a vivid imagination, and will be inclined to "romance," a habit it will outgrow, however. Its memory will be one of its strongest characteristics, and it will learn without apparent effort. It will have an attractive personality and will form many friendships.

Born January 11, you do not belong, at least in your manner, to a modern school of beings. You possess old-fashioned manners and courtesies. You are self-possessed without being priggish, and dignified without being unapproachable or cold. Yours is an inborn culture, difficult to be acquired. It is not difficult for you to be tactful, and it is easy for you to say the right word at the right time and place.

You will be most successful if you give latitude to your natural originality. Attempting to do what others have done, and in the same way, cramps your style. You have sufficient self-confidence to strike out on your own, and the ability to make good. You like recognition, and would rather be a big frog in a little puddle than a little frog in a big one. Your favorite companions are good listeners, as you are fond of having the floor yourself, and like so many other people, are always anxious to get in your word.

You always mean what you say, and are worthy of all the confidence reposed in you. While your foresight is not very great, you profit by experience, and do not have to learn a lesson twice. You are more popular with those of your own than those of the opposite sex.

Successful people born January 11:
1—Alexander Hamilton—statesman.
2—William W. Seaton—journalist.
3—Isaac Kapp—abolitionist.
4—Viscount Curzon—English statesman.
6—Richard Graham Davenport—Commodore, U. S. Navy.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ONE REASON WHY SEEDS FAIL TO GROW.

MOST failures in starting seeds in the house, and I might add in the open as well, are due to covering them with too deep a layer of soil after sowing. In many instances merely pressing the seeds into the soil with the bottom of a tumbler is all that is necessary. Press gently, but do not pack the soil. It is very important to have your soil in a condition to work nicely.

Very wet soil is to be avoided, for it packs hard, and when it dries it bakes and the tender shoots can not get through.

Growing seeds in the house is extremely interesting work, but to be successful it needs constant care and attention. Inexperienced persons frequently lose their seeds from damping. This condition is the result of keeping the soil too damp and also from having the seeds sown too thickly.

In the beginning it is well to place a newspaper over the young seedlings and water over the paper. The water will gradually filter through the newspaper and prevent the life being dashed out of the young seeds by the forceful stream of water from even the finest nozzle of the watering can.

All annuals can be propagated from seed. The seed boxes take up so little room that it is a pity more gardeners do not attempt to sow more seeds this way, for by so doing the blossoming season is hastened at least ten days and sometimes two or three weeks. All real flower lovers know the joy of a few more weeks of color in plots and borders.

Annuals pay large dividends. They are so inexpesive and so colorful when grown in mass that there is really no excuse for even a wee bare spot in our gardens. So at this time let us study the new seed catalogues and consider the low-growing, sprightly charm of little flowers; the varieties listed as "close-to-the-ground" plants intended for use in carpeting the ground with color.

Such plants as violas grow easily from seed sown in flats in the house. These lovely little plants reseed themselves, which means flowers for years to come.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed stamped envelope is supplied.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

EARACHE.

IT seems probable that the ear drum is less necessary than we regarded it. It is not exactly in the appendix class, nor is it—like a fine gray cowlick—an adornment. It is of some service, though we seem to have rated it too highly. There are many people with perforated drums who hear very well and some who hear poorly have drums that appear to be first class. Occasionally, in a routine examination, a person is told that he has perforated ear drums and the information was quite unexpected. He cannot recall when they were perforated nor has he been conscious of any defect in hearing. While this is all true it does not prove that ear drums are useless, or that any man should be in a hurry to have holes made in his.

Dr. E. M. Josephson thinks we have been too hasty in lancing ear drums. When we have had earache and, even more frequently when the children have had earache, the tendency has been to lance the ear drums without much hesitation. We are told that the operation was a mild one and that holes in ear drums were repaired readily by nature, both of which statements are relatively true. Sometimes we were told that the drum was the seat of the trouble and that it was necessary to lance to prevent mastoid abscess. Dr. Josephson says the first of these conclusions is often not true.

The ear often expresses discomfort due to conditions in the nose, mouth and elsewhere. He contends that earache in teething babies is often due to the teeth cutting their way through the gums and pushing through the crowded teeth in undersized jaws. In these cases lancing the gums will do more good than lancing the ear drums.

In other cases the real seat of the trouble is in the nose, tonsils or throat. He advises that the examination include looking in the mouth and nose, as well as into the ear. He has seen reflex earaches set up by such simple procedures as using a tongue depressor to examine the back of the throat of a resisting child. For all cases of earache of this origin he advises sprays of pinephrine or ephedrine solution to the nose or throat. He is especially opposed to blowing out the Eustachian tubes for retracted ear drums or any other manifestation of reflex troubles in the ears. He does not say so, but I imagine he thinks the people who have used oil ear drops for earache have rendered a better service than some other people have. They may not have done much good, but they have not done harm.

Fortunately, most ear pains tend to end spontaneously. Spraying the nose or throat and treating other troubles that are likely to cause reflex ear troubles sometimes hasten relief.

ROWING AND SWIMMING.

K. R. H. writes: Three years ago I suffered a stroke of paralysis on the right side. I had a very marvelous recovery and can write again, and walk with a slight limp. Can you advise me of some exercises to strengthen the muscle at back of right thigh? It gives a little when I walk much. I am between 60 and 70 and am well otherwise.

REPLY.

Rowing and swimming are excellent. Lie on your back and raise your legs to the vertical position. Repeat many times.

THE SQUANDERERS.

The Post presents today a partial list of bills offered in Congress during this session, together with an estimate of the amount called for by each bill. The sum total exceeds $29,000,000,000, all of which is outside of and beyond the budget.

Presumably each of these bills has been offered in good faith. Certainly no senator or representative would admit that he had offered a bill for the purpose of deceiving his constituents with false hopes, or that, although knowing his bill would drain the Treasury and increase taxation, he had offered it merely to gain notoriety or to embarrass the administration, and without thought that it would be enacted.

Some of the chief critics of President Hoover are the authors of bills which, if enacted, would bankrupt the Treasury and increase taxes. Senator McKellar, for example, attacks Mr. Hoover for extravagance in making up the budget, and yet Mr. McKellar proposes to make appropriations aggregating $860,000,000 beyond the budget.

Senator La Follette, an advocate of unemployment relief, would exact from taxpayers the sum of $5,750,000,000 without provision against their consequent destitution.

Senator Norris, a critic of administration efficiency, offers to help by draining the Treasury of $3,126,000,000 which it does not possess.

Senator Brookhart yearns for relief of agriculture and veterans, to such an extent that he would add to the deficit by $3,500,000,000.

Can it be that the astounding demands contained in this list are the result of careful thought on the part of the authors? Have they studied the state of the Treasury and the revenues, and tried to adjust their proposals to the condition of the taxpayers? If so, they reveal themselves to be utterly ignorant and incompetent.

Where is the sense of responsibility on the part of legislators who propose to bankrupt the Government and impoverish the taxpayers?

What value can be attached to the opinions of a legislator, on any subject, if he destroys public confidence by demanding appropriations for his pet projects equal to or exceeding the entire budget of the United States Government?

The mere listing of these proposals enables the taxpayers of the United States to form a picture of the obstacles confronting President Hoover in his efforts to keep the Government solvent. Many legislators in both parties are faithfully cooperating with him in trying to reduce expenditures and conserve revenue for necessities. But others, who are among his most bitter critics, are asking Congress to plunge into bankruptcy and national panic.

VACILLATING ON TAXES.

Representative Rainey, Democratic floor leader, is beginning to learn the curse of candor in politics. Last week he talked of "ameliorating modification" of the administration's tax program and suggested that the Democrats would compel "entrenched wealth" to carry a greater share of the tax burden. Shortly after these statements were made Mr. Rainey and Chairman Collier, of the ways and means committee, who had been equally voluble, had a session with Speaker Garner. Apparently they emerged from this interview with somewhat different ideas about taxation.

A week ago the Democratic leaders were especially opposed to the sales tax because such levies tend to distribute the cost of Government among a majority of the people. Now Mr. Rainey says that the Democratic program undoubtedly will contain some sales taxes. He suggests that it will be necessary to raise between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 by this method. Apparently he is convinced that the necessary additional revenue can not all be drawn from "entrenched wealth."

As a result of Mr. Rainey's vacillations between conflicting sentiments on the subject the public is in a state of befuddlement as to the Democratic tax policy. The policy committee made up of leading Democrats in both houses met during the week to shape a program on this important subject, but the public is still kept in darkness. The same committee completely sidestepped the tariff issue, but it will find difficulty in creating a dummy tax measure that ignores rate changes.

THE ASSAULT UPON CHINA.

A hint comes from Japan that the Tokyo government may ask for a conference of the signatories of the nine-power treaty with a view to clarifying the meaning of the words "administrative integrity" as used in the treaty. It is suggested that the "administrative integrity" of Manchuria is something different from the "administrative integrity" of China, and that Japan, when it adhered to the Kellogg pact, should have made a reservation on Manchuria, but neglected to do so.

This position, if assumed by Japan, will not only be untenable, but will be an affront to all parties to the treaty. The treaty was drawn up for the purpose of maintaining the independence and administrative integrity of China, including Manchuria. An assault upon Manchuria is an assault upon China. The fact that Japan has interests in Manchuria can not be properly magnified into a claim that China is not the sovereign.

Japan's occupation of Manchuria is accompanied by a Japanese program of reconstruction of the government of that region, apparently tending to make it a separate and independent state, but actually placing it under Japanese control. This program, if carried forward, can lead to nothing else than an invasion of the rights of all parties to the treaty, as well as an assault upon the independence of China. Therefore the program must cease, unless Japan is prepared to clash with other powers, including the United States.

Japanese statesmen and newspapers lay stress upon the strength of Japan's position in actually occupying Manchuria. It is hoped that the powers concerned in the nine-power treaty will recognize accomplished facts and adjust themselves to the new regime. Nothing could be more mistaken than the Japanese assumption that the interested powers will acquiesce in the destruction of Chinese sovereignty over Manchuria.

OPENING THE FAR NORTH.

The opening of the railroad to Moose Harbor, on the southern extremity of James Bay, provides Ontario with her first ocean port. Formerly it was necessary to make the trip accompanied by guides, and for the greater part of the year dog teams were used to transport supplies and passengers to Moose Factory, the historic trading post on the bay. It is now but an overnight ride by Pullman from Toronto, or a day and a night from New York. American tourists are preparing to visit James Bay in large numbers. As a tourist center, Moose Harbor threatens to take the leadership from some of the better known resorts.

As an industrial center the prospects of the district are bright. Fifty miles to the southwest is the Onakawana lignite field. Preliminary drillings have revealed at least 100,000,000 tons of soft coal of a high heat efficiency. Many of the seams are 40 to 50 feet thick, and the overburden so thin that ordinary steam shovels are able to extract the coal, making the cost extremely low. In the vicinity are also deposits of gypsum, fire clay, china clay, silica sand, peat and iron. It is also believed that oil and natural gas will be located. Both coal and iron are found in the locality, which may make Canada independent of the outside world for her supply of steel. It is probable that Moose Harbor will become the first booming steel town of the Far North.

An almost unlimited amount of power can be developed for industrial projects from many large streams flowing into James Bay. On one of them the Hudson Bay Power Co. has already built a $25,000,000 plant to supply power for mining and pulp factories. It can produce 250,000 horsepower, of which the government has contracted to take 100,000 under a 40-year contract. Another 250,000 horsepower is available in the James Bay Basin.

The climate of Moose Factory is about like that of Winnipeg. Navigation of the bay begins about the middle of June. Vessels coming in through the Hudson Strait can transport cargoes of wheat to Liverpool without difficulty. From this section are also brought some of the finest furs. Only in winter is the country bleak and inhospitable. Sweetpeas bloom in August and fine vegetable gardens rival those of any section. There is plenty of hay for horses and cattle, and though the growing season is short the products are unsurpassed in quality.

A WAR DEBT FALLACY.

Advocates of reduction or cancellation of the debts owed by European governments to the United States are casting about for an appealing argument that may be presented to the American people. They have found public sentiment unalterably opposed to further concessions of any kind to Europe. Hence, strenuous efforts are being made to present the issue in a new light.

One of the popular arguments of this type is that the value of the debts has substantially increased since the funding agreements were negotiated. Prof. Fisher, Yale economist, contends that Great Britain owes the United States about $2,000,000,000 more than she did in 1925 because of what he terms the "bloated dollar." A more accurate statement of his theory is that commodity prices have declined during recent years, and that the dollars which Great Britain must pay to this country will buy more goods than they formerly would.

Another variation of the same theory is that the British pound has depreciated in value, and that taxpayers of that country must now furnish a larger number of pounds to pay the debt installments. The theorists fail to note that Great Britain also sells her products, which are paid for with depreciated pounds, to other countries that maintain the gold standard. If the depreciated currency is a detriment in one case, it must be a benefit in the other.

In reality the changing value of foreign money has nothing to do with the obligation of European debtors to pay the United States. They agreed to pay in gold dollars. The very reason of requiring payment in those terms was to prevent fluctuation in the actual amount due. At present more goods are required to make up the equivalent of these annuities, but could any one be so impractical as to suggest that the debts be revised with every fluctuation of the international price index? Prof. Fisher is merely arguing for his so-called commodity dollar, which would be based not upon gold, but upon the value of a certain group of commodities. His intimation that debts should be readjusted on the existing price levels, which are the lowest the world has known for many years, is merely an indirect method of suggesting that about half of these obligations be transferred to American taxpayers.

It is absurd to suppose that commodity prices will remain where they are at present. Over long periods, commodity prices tend to rise. The debt installments extend over 62 years. Before they are paid the debtor nations will probably need far less goods to make up the value of their debt installments than they needed in 1925. But the obligation will remain constant, based on the solid foundation of the gold dollar. The cancellationists will have to originate a more subtle argument if they expect to appeal to the American people.

GOV. GEN. ROOSEVELT.

The appointment of Col. Theodore Roosevelt to be Governor General of the Philippines is fortunate in every respect. He is especially well qualified for the post by reason of recent experience as Governor of Porto Rico, and by his study of insular administrative problems. Possessing the confidence of the President, and enjoying intimate friendship with the Secretary of War, the new governor general may be expected to deal successfully with the vexed questions that are constantly arising in the Philippines.

Porto Rico's difficulties have been as taxing upon the patience and ability of Col. Roosevelt as any he will encounter in the Philippines, and he has earned public praise by the manner in which he has met the situation. Disaster, economic prostration, disease and other adversities have dogged the citizens of Porto Rico. But for the indomitable efforts of Col. Roosevelt the island would have suffered additional hardship because of the neglect of Congress. He has fought the battle of Porto Rico in Washington as well as in San Juan, and has laid foundations that will not be shaken. His successor will find the administration an easier task because of Col. Roosevelt's arduous spadework.

In the broader field at Manila an opportunity for splendid service awaits Col. Roosevelt. The retiring governor general, former Secretary of War Davis, has maintained an efficient and progressive administration, but the agitation for premature independence is a disturbing factor which will require the new administrator to meet unexpected issues. He will benefit by his predecessor's good work, but he can not merely carry on a well-organized government. He must face problems in statesmanship involving several discordant races in varying states of enlightenment. Col. Roosevelt's qualities will be sharply tested, but no one who knows him can doubt that he will prove equal to the test.

TARIFF BENEFITS

From the Minneapolis Journal.

Government figures, now becoming available, accent the protective value of the present tariff law to agriculture and particularly to the farmers of the Northwest.

With unprecedented depression abroad bringing them low sale prices, the farmers of Australia, Argentina, Uruguay, New Zealand, Denmark, Canada and all the other farm countries of the world have looked with longing eyes at the American market. This market, however, has been reserved for the American farmer by the protective tariff. Because of the tariff he has enjoyed a home market, depressed to be sure, but a market that would have been ruined indeed, if foreign farm products had been permitted to flood it.

Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, writing in the Farm Journal, quotes figures compiled from the records, which show the extent to which imports of farm products have fallen off since the Smoot-Hawley tariff law went into effect, that is, the extent to which the tariff is protecting the home market for the home farmer.

During the first eight months of 1931 shipments into this country of the following major farm products were decreased by these amounts, as compared with the eight months of 1930 preceding the operation of the present tariff rates:

Sugar, lbs.	1,869,000,000
Hides, lbs.	171,000,000
Flaxseed, bushels	10,000,000
Wool, lbs.	180,000,000
Meats, lbs.	21,000,000

In other words, the tariff, during just the eight months period, has prevented these farm products from flooding our markets to this huge extent. It has also prevented the dumping in an enormous way of butter, eggs, poultry, bacon, casein, cheese, potatoes, vegetables, fruits, live cattle and other things Northwestern farmers produce. To what lower depths would our farm prices have sagged, if our markets has been thus flooded?

According to Dr. Klein, here is the way some imports of foreign farm products have been checked by the present tariff law, the comparisons being for the first eight months of 1931, as compared with same period for 1930:

	8 months, 1930	8 months, 1931
Milk, etc.	$2,038,000	$131,000
Hides	20,663,000	5,314,000
Meats	9,748,000	3,534,000
Cheese	12,870,000	9,030,000
Calf skins	6,670,000	4,916,000
Wool	30,795,000	16,988,000

These figures show, as Dr. Klein points out, that there has been less foreign competition in farm products since the tariff law went into effect. It is well to remember also that there has been less competition, in spite of the fact that every condition in these foreign farm producing countries has operated to develop a ruinous competition.

The tariff law in operation is effectively saving the American market for the American farmer. There is need for organized effort to correct the injustice of free imports of vegetable oils and starches, but if the Northwest farmer is alive to his own interests, he will regard as unfriendly any effort to discredit the tariff principle.

And Well He Knows It!

POST HASTE.

From his rule of 1,500,000 Porto Ricans Col. Roosevelt will go to the governorship of 12,500,000 Filipinos, but it will not be a tougher job.

England takes Japan's word for the open door, or at least puts the United States in the position of questioning it.

If Germany has received twice the amount in foreign loans that she has paid in reparations the Young committee and the Old World are learning that it is well buried in immovable improvements that account clearly for Germany's "incapacity to pay."

Ambassador Dawes' denial that his retirement might indicate aspirations for a presidential nomination indicates that a London residence has not diminished his capacity for coining forceful damnigrams.

The Smith-Raskob-Shouse triumvirate, to prove that they did not dictate what the Democratic committee said, clamped the muffler on so that it could say nothing.

What Washington doesn't know about namesake George by Thanksgiving won't be the fault of the bicentennial commissions, which will stage a continuous performance nine months long.

Chicago's air-cooled auditorium captured both conventions. It will be interesting to see which party's superheated speeches will be the greatest test of its counteracting efficiency.

Times are so hard that only ten women were hurt Saturday pushing in store windows trying to get to bargain sales.

Something may have to be done about Ely Culbertson. Not satisfied with the world-wide rumpus his New York bridge contest stirred up, he plans numerous international marathons. The League of Nations may yet find useful employment.

Washington's winter climate has a Saturday evening snowstorm properly liquidated by morning so that it will not interfere with the Sunday promenade.

Chicago shows great confidence in her recuperative powers, with only two weeks allowed for recovery between the meetings of the national political conventions.

If Senator Ashurst's amendment had passed, authorizing the Reconstruction Corporation to extend loans to all who could not get them elsewhere, 50,000,000 borrowers would have elected him President.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

CURE FOR THE SULKS.

Sometimes when I don't play
The way she wants me to
Then Florence May will say:
"All right! I'm mad with you!"
And then she'll sulk and pout,
An' next day she pretends
When I come walkin' out
That we're not bein' friends.

But when I get a dime
For lollypops or gum,
Or if it's cookie time
An' Mary gives me some
An' I go out to play
Just like I've done before,
Then Florence May will say:
"I'm not mad any more."

It's rather queer to me,
But mother says it's how Things used to be when she Was young as I am now.
Her playmates used to cry,
"I'm mad at you," an' then
Candy or cake or pie
Would make them friends again.

College Now Offers Course In Proper Way to Hook Fish

By JOHN J. DALY

Higher education in the United States takes a swing toward the sea.

The first fishing class in an American university gets under way at Stanford, on the West Coast.

Prefaced by a lecture on the care of rods, the preservation of the enamel on lines, and the making of flies, practice in fly-casting started the students off on the first semester.

One of the great questions of the age, and one never quite satisfactorily answered, is this: Are fish color blind?

While scientific laboratory studies will be pursued with avidity, to determine an exact answer, the faculty of the university let it be understood at the outset that the institution must steer a clear course, so far as the controversy over fish sight is concerned.

Some say yes. Some say no. The University of Stanford says yes and no. It awaits the dictum of the first graduating class from the School of Fisheries.

Certainly, some member of the fishing class, graduated "cum laude," will solve the mystery some day, and all the theory of piscatorial art will be, of necessity, thrown overboard—hook, line and sinker.

If fish can see, obviously, the way to approach them and lure them from the depths must be from a different angle.

The poor fish are about to enter a new phase of existence, or extermination, with this group getting their implements ready for dipping into the mysterious profundities of the deep. The wonder is the world got along so well without such studies.

Flying fish, sail fish, Portuguese men o' war, little fish, big fish, tame fish and wild, all kinds of fish—river and lake fish, old fish and young—even goldfish, will realize instinctively that a new era has dawned in the kingdom of Neptune.

Undoubtedly, it will be discovered by the students that fish possess instinct, along with eyesight—and that they, the fish, can swim.

One thing is certain: The fish course will be popular.

The Friday lectures, especially, should appeal, and other universities eventually will fall in line.

Stanford leads the way, singing, to the tune of "Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching:"

Fish, fish, fish, for dear old Stanford,
Whether weather's foul or fine;
But, be careful of your throat,
Never, never rock the boat,
And, remember, always hold onto the line.

There is the pursuance of the fish course, and the study of fish habits—a major subject on any university curriculum—a world of by-products of psychology and philosophy, including patience.

Naturally, the first dean of the piscatorial school is a man named Finny, and the scholars, in all probability, will bait the professor.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

A Political Tariff Bill.

Detroit News.

The Democrats' tariff bill, introduced in the House by Rep. Collier of Mississippi, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is peculiar. It is not, in the generally accepted sense of the word, a tariff bill, for it does not propose that Congress change a single schedule of the Smoot-Hawley act. It looks rather like a political document, submitted for campaign purposes.

The bill proposes to take away from the President the right to increase or reduce schedules on the recommendation of the Tariff Commission, and to give the right to Congress. It would empower the President to appoint a "consumers' counsel" at a salary of $12,000 a year, with such an office and staff as he may require. The duty of this counsel would be to represent the consuming public at meetings of the Tariff Commission. The bill "respectifully requests" the President to initiate a movement for a permanent international economic conference to arrange better tariff relations and do away with unfair trade practices.

We can not accept the Democratic bill seriouly as a public measure. Neither, apparently, can the Republican leaders in Congres. Even the Democrats expect it either to be beaten in the Senate, or vetoed by the President. And that, it would appear, is exactly what they desire. So we arrive at the conclusion that the bill means political maneuvering in view of the November election, and nothing more.

S'matter, Gotham?

Los Angeles Times.

Gov. Roosevelt of New York State has been governing from Warm Springs, Ga., and Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York City has been mayoring from Western State. Remote control seems to be the most salubrious at certain seasons in Gotham.

Tariff Commission Activities.

Kansas City Star.

The tariff commission, through the President, is making desirable or necessary changes in the tariff schedules. So far the commission has made 72 recommendations to President Hoover, all of which have been promulgated by the chief executive except four, which have been remanded for further study. The recommendations have been made after hearings by the commission, which proposed 17 increases, 12 decreases and 34 "no changes."

The commission is a bipartisan body, less susceptible to political influences than most congressmen. The commission is in a position to give detached study to each plea laid before it. If its recommendations should go to Congress instead of the President, as proposed by Democratic leaders in their legislative program, much time would be consumed, and there would be the inevitable log-rolling that is such a handicap in all tariff legislation.

A Pertinent Question.

St. Cloud (Minn.) Times-Journal.

Senator Hull, of Tennessee, says if this country is to collect war obligations from Europe it will have to lower its tariff rates, so that the countries of Europe can sell their products here, and thus get their money to pay their debts. That is one view. With some five or six millions of Americans out of work, how is it going to help them by having Europe dump its manufactured products on the United States, thus preventing to that extent the American factories in giving employment?

Akron Beacon Journal.

There are two kinds of Americans: Those who have loaned money to Europe and those who don't care a whoop whether Europe sinks or swims.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Tariff Reduction as Proposed by Senator Costigan Would Result in Prolonging Depression and Unemployment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that Senator Costigan (Democrat), is urging direct Federal aid for relief of the unemployed, which is very noble of him. But, at the same time he is demanding a tariff reduction that would result in prolonging the depression and adding several million more unemployed to be relieved out of Government funds. He seems ignorant of the fact that fear of a tariff reduction on the part of American business leaders is one reason why prosperity does not return.

If the Democratic politicians really wanted to see the depression ended before the election, they would stop their threats of tinkering with the tariff. They accuse the President of trying to aid Europe first and let America go. Who would benefit if their free trade policy should be adopted? The answer is so simple that it is a wonder their dull minds have failed to grasp it. The European industrialists would benefit by it, of course, at the expense of American industries and American labor.

E. D. LYLE.

Commends Editorial "Futile Hunger Marchers"—Outsiders Should Not March Upon Washington and Expect to Receive Assistance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my sincere thanks for your editorial in Friday's Post entitled "Futile Hunger Marchers." It expressed the views of very many, if not all, of your readers. Why impose the heavy burden of caring for Pittsburgh's unemployed on other localities trying to care for and solve their own problems?

Is there any way in which Washington can make it known that this city can not and will not provide for any more burdensome schemes? How much sickness and hardship these "marchers" will suffer as a cause of this march through the winter rains and cold, the public will probably never know.

Their own community charities will have this added burden to assume. Let Washington's announcement be, "No more accommodations for futile marchers!" C. B. SMITH.

Predicts Renomination of Alfred E. Smith, the "Happy Warrior."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the approach of the 1932 Democratic convention, that will nominate a candidate for President, the millions who voted for Alfred E. Smith seem to be content that he should again be given the nomination, because he was defeated by false propaganda, by corrupt practices and by promises unfulfilled.

Confronted almost every day in the public press by the report that leading members of some of our churches have been guilty of evading the corupt practices act and spending thousands of dollars to defeat Al Smith in 1928 and failing to report that expenditure, and now stand indicted by a senatorial committee, with the prospect of a jail sentence in the near future.

When the people found out that they had been deceived in the greatest of all whispering political campaigns, they demanded retribution at the first opportunity and to repeat a street parlance, they got it with a vengeance, for many of the political slanderers of Al Smith were relegated to the political graveyard.

We are now facing the second winter of this devastating, crime-creating and death-dealing unemployment situation, and whether it is another noble experiment or not, the fact remains that conditions are getting worse and the only remedy so far advanced is to appoint committees.

Can any one imagine that if former Governor of the State of New York, Alfred E. Smith, faced a condition that now exists, he would not do more than appoint committees? He would have gotten busy at the first intimation of a Nation-wide unemployment situation.

With a record vote of 15,000,000 given to him in 1928, with the people now knowing the truth of the methods used to defeat him, with the knowledge that the leaders in that contest have been repudiated, with the deplorable conditions that have existed and still exist, it is no wonder that the people are praying for a man to lead them.

Political machinery or log rolling will have little effect on the people when the time comes to nominate the candidate for President, for the voters know the man they want, and that man is Alfred E. Smith, the conscientious, lovable and fearless Happy Warrior.

Beaten Republicans Should Sing Low in Urging Hoover to Step Aside.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It ill-behooves any Republican, so-called or defiled, to ask President Hoover to stand aside and permit some one else to be nominated for President, but for one who was beaten to a frazzle, as was Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, to ask Mr. Hoover not to become a candidate again this year, is an insult to every decent and right-thinking citizen in this country.

As the Public Ledger said last Sunday in one of the greatest editorials ever written: "Sniping at a President, Damning a Congress and Wailing for Leadership" will get us nowhere.

What do these troublemakers want anyway, another war? It is my opinion that if the many foolish and silly things said about Mr. Hoover should bring about his defeat it will surely bring on a great catastrophe or another war, or both.

Archaeological Society To Hear Arthur S. Riggs.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin will receive the Archaeological Society on Friday evening, at their estate, Arbremont, on the occasion of the society's 166th meeting. The big drawing room will be arranged to accommodate the members and their guests, who will hear a lecture, "The Spanish Pageant," delivered by Arthur Stanley Riggs, F. R. G. S., the secretary of the organization. Mr. Riggs, who is the author of a number of books and editor of the magazine Art and Archaeology, has been recognized for years an an authority on Spain, and has written and lectured widely on this subject, not only in the United States, but Spain itself.

When the great exposition was in progress in Seville four years ago, Mr. Riggs was chosen to deliver the address of welcome in Spanish when the American Pavilion was opened. He was also the guest of the Royal Academy of History in Madrid at that time and addressed that august body, over which the Duke of Alba presided, on the debt America owes to Spain in an historical and linguistic sense. Three years ago King Alfonso honored him signally by recognizing his work with the collar of the Royal Order of Isabel, the Catholic, one of the oldest and most distinguished orders in Spain, conferring upon him the rank of commander.

In the present lecture, which bears the same title as his last book, Mr. Riggs will endeavor to present an interpretation of the Spanish character and history through consideration of the architecture and art of the country. Colored lantern slides will illustrate the address.

The February meeting will be a gala occasion in honor of the birthday of H. R. H. Prince Farocq, heir to the Egyptian throne. The Egyptian Minister, Sesostris Sidarouss Pasha, will be the host at his legation, and the speaker in all probability will be Prof. Charles Breasted, of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, who will tell of the epoch-making work done in the land of the Nile by the institute under the leadership of his father, Dr. James H. Breasted. No announcement of the date or speakers for the March and April meetings is as yet possible, but the society's season will end with a garden party at Rippon Lodge, Virginia, with President and Mrs. Ellis as hosts for the second time this season.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde will entertain at a reception with dancing this afternoon from 4:30 until 7 o'clock, in the Chinese room of the Mayflower. Receiving with Mr. MacBryde will be his niece, Mrs. Robert Hitt Sparks, of Columbia, S. C. Mrs. Sparks will wear a gown of yellow taffeta and will carry a bouquet of talisman roses.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Ernest Lee Jahncke, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Mrs. J. Thompson Wailes, Mrs. Hobart Hawkins, Mrs. Absolam Waller and Mrs. William Wheatley.

Mr. John Martin, of New York, will give two lectures in the 1931-32 series, both to be on the subject of the "Modern Drama and the Theater of Tomorrow," at the Caroline McKinley Studio.

The first lecture on "The Fine Art of Acting," will take place, not on Thursday, as originally announced, but Thursday evening, January 21, at 9 o'clock, in order that Miss Martha Graham, who will appear in the Capital in dance concert on Friday afternoon, January 22, may be the honor guest at the lecture. The second lecture, originally scheduled for February 18, will take place Monday evening, February 15, the change of this date being necessitated by the final rehearsals for the masque of "Wakefield," the big religious pageant which will officially open the bicentennial celebration in the Capital, and in which the McKinley Dancers will have an important part.

Mr. Martin's second drama lecture, on February 15, will be called "The Contemporary Theater, If Any." Before becoming America's outstanding critic of the dance art, Mr. Martin was closely associated with the theater in America, having pioneered with Maurice Browne and Stuart Walker in the early days of the Little Theater in Chicago and elsewhere in this country.

The custom of holding spontaneous discussion, after the lecture by Mr. Martin, will continue for the drama talks, and personal reactions, queries and critical analysis of the subject presented, will be the order of the evening.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

IT is a happy circumstance that Belle Bennett emerges in her propria persona at the conclusion of "Lady Taylor—Waitress," in which she is headlining this week's vaudeville bill at RKO-Keith's. Otherwise, when Manager Francis Hardie Meakin took me back, I am afraid to wreck her brief dinner hour, at the end of the second performance Saturday afternoon, I should not have had the remotest idea with whom I might have been having an interview.

BELLE BENNETT

But seated in her dressing room—after a hazardous bit of back-stage trail-blazing over automobiles, grand pianos, lamp-posts and other theater props—it was the Belle Bennett I had known in many splendid screen impersonations who sat opposite me, a beautiful and charming lady who immediately set up a perplexing paradox.

It takes no more than a moment or two to perceive that by every natural endowment Miss Bennett is equipped to excel in the "mother roles" that have become most closely identified with her film renown. Quick first impressions are of her gentleness, graciousness and great and inclusive kindliness—qualities that are reflected in her eyes, her voice and her attitude toward life.

But—and here comes the incongruity and the other side of the paradox—the longer you converse with her and observe the mobile play of her features, the younger Belle Bennett grows. One gradually becomes conscious that the wavy blonde hair is matched by large gray eyes, a peach-blow complexion that is marred by no wrinkle and an eager responsiveness and ready wit that are the inalienable attributes of youth.

I remarked something of the sort and was reminded of the time when Miss Bennett was cast as Lois Moran's screen mother and was supposed to be anguishing in bed in the throes of a critical illness, while her daughter was up and about her customary pursuits. When the rushes were viewed in the projection room, Miss Bennett looked so much younger than Miss Moran that a retake had to be made to bring about a sufficient disparity in ages to create a believable illusion of mother and daughter.

BELLE BENNETT was born to the theater—although not on her father's showboat, as has been erroneously reported from time to time by overzealous press agents. Her father, to be sure, owned and operated a showboat at the time of her birth, on which her mother, a Belle Bennett before her, was leading woman, but Belle Bennett 2d was born in the Coon River country of Iowa, accompanying her parents later to Minnesota, where Bennett, pere, established winter quarters and recruited the artists for his tent shows.

From the time she was old enough to understand what it was all about, Belle Bennett appeared in her father's companies. At the age of 12, believe it or not, she was a proud and agile acrobat and tumbler who esteemed her little white cotton tights as the ultimate symbol of success in her chosen profession!

A succession of sorrows have punctuated the life of this accomplished actress since the death of her father, following an automobile accident from which he lingered for an agonizing period of thirteen months. And only a few days after the death of her son, Miss Bennett was summoned to play what proved to be one of the most successful roles she has ever essayed before the cameras, Stella Dallas.

All this, instead of leaving Belle Bennett embittered, has imbued her with a vast compassion and boundless sympathy for others in distress.

MISS BENNETT has been on tour in "Lady Taylor—Waitress" only a matter of some six or seven weeks and plans an early return to the West Coast studios, where she is always assured of a warm welcome as one of the cinema's most gifted character actresses.

"Lady Taylor—Waitress" is not a new vehicle, recently dropped from John B. Hymer's pen. It was played some twelve or fourteen years ago by Jean Adair as a 45-minute playlet in the two-a-day. Miss Bennett rewrote it to meet the demands of present-day conditions. It is being presented here in its shortest version by reason of the four shows a day. When only three a day are required, it is ten minutes longer.

Since this all happened on Miss Bennett's dinner hour, I'll wager she is of the opinion that some such diminishing scale of running time for interviews would be a swell idea, too.

PERHAPS I should have warned you that when I accompanied Miss Bennett on that uncharted trek across stage over everything used in the current RKO-Keith stage bill, I had just that minute come down from Clyde Cooke's dressing room to which I had tagged him when he came off from his second turn on the stage. If ever a guy felt guilty, I did about that.

CLYDE COOKE

While a majority of today's theatergoers look upon Clyde Cooke as only another picture actor who has turned to vaudeville betwen films, exactly the opposite is the case. Clyde is an old stage comedian who went from vaudeville, musical comedy and revue into pictures following an already extensive stage career that had brought him to international eminence behind the footlights. In his present act he is performing stunts that he has never done for the cameras and revealing a versatility of which those unacquainted with his earlier career never have been aware. His act is a strenuous and exhausting combination of chatter, song, dance, acrobatics and tumbling that leaves him limp after it is over.

That's where my feeling of guilt comes in for having bothered him after, instead of before, his trick out there in front of that audience. When we reached his dressing room he was dripping wet with perspiration and breathing like a featherweight who might just have finished a few fast rounds with Dempsey. To him, however, it was all in the day's work and the fact that the orchestra had missed most of his cues and the lights hadn't been precisely right on his act didn't bother him any. In fact, he had taken every slip good naturedly and converted it into an impromptu laugh.

I mean, this Clyde Cooke is a sure-enough showman.

TO go back a little, Clyde Cooke was born in Port Macquarie, a seaport town about midway between Sidney and Brisbane on the east coast of Australia. He began his clowning there as a lad in his teens and finally embarked for England to do a round of the 'alls. There he came under the expert scrutiny of Charlot, whose "Charlot's Revue" introduced both Gertrude Lawrence and Beatrice Lillie (Lady Peel) to American audiences, and was engaged by that astute producer with whom he remained for a matter of some six years or so.

When the war broke out, Clyde reported to the colors, all theatrical contracts being held in abeyance for the period of the hostilities. Mustered out with the Anzacs in his native Australia, he returned to Europe and resumed under Charlot's management. It was here that Charles Dillingham saw him and recruited him for one of those mammoth spectacles that R. H. Burnside used to put on at the New York Hippodrome. And it was at the Hippodrome, in turn, that scouts of the Fox Pictures Corporation spotted him as a likely comic for short-reel screen comedies. He signed with Fox and has been in pictures ever since, until the inauguration of his present vaudeville tour which has now been under way for about 16 weeks.

WHEN I remarked that in all the films in which I had ever seen him he disclosed only a fragment of his capability and the all-around versatility that he reveals in a quarter-hour on the stage in his present act, he laid the blame at the door of the producers.

"In some of the old silent pictures," he recalled, "I did do a little dancing and once or twice I was permitted to do a head-spin or some simple acrobatic stunt just for a laugh. After sound and dialogue came in, it was taken for granted by the producers that those already in pictures wouldn't do and the big parade started from New York stages to the Hollywood studios. As a matter of fact, some of us had had more stage experience than the stage people who were imported."

Under present arrangements Mr. Cooke is scheduled to abandon his present tour in time to resume picture work on the radio lot in Hollywood on February 14. There is a possibility, however, that his vaudeville bookings will be continued a little longer in view of the hit he has scored.

Incidentally, the attractive young woman appearing in his act as Alice Draper in private life is Mrs. Clyde Cooke.

And here is one more phenomenon of the theater: Cooke is another player who sheds years as a duck does water while you are talking with him!

Upon request the terms of the contest are printed once more.

Group No. 1—Ages up to 10 years. First prize, $100; second prize, $25; 25 next-best essays, $5 each.

Group No. 2—Ages 10 to 12 years. First prize, $100; second prize, $25; 25 next-best essays, $5 each.

George Washington, President.
By
.....

"Let us skip over several important epics of George Washington's life and find ourselves in the year 1789, the date April 30. In his fifty-seventh year, after repeated requests, he took the oath of office as the First President of the newly organized United States of America.

The political party who, against Washington's wishes, put him in office, desired as he did, a mighty Government with a strong central power that could amply control the far-flung outposts of a young but rapidly growing Nation.

Alongside of his brilliant compatriots, such as Jay, Adams, and Hamilton, who were unusually embodied with political imagination, Washington must have seemed dull. Yet he had a very good instinct for practical politics. He had a sense of historical continuity. He felt that important things that were done by or against the Government in those crucial days would show its effects later on in the life of the Nation.

He had no carefully laid out system to follow, but his actions all bear witness to a very choice and exact way of doing things.

Chose Strong Men.

Before giving his approval for the election of men to official positions, he would look into their past careers very carefully so as to be able to know whether he could count on them. He chose strong men to fill positions in the Government which he was building.

Washington dreamed and worked night and day for his country. He so overworked himself once that he almost died from an attack of pneumonia. Although he regained his health through hard exercise and rest, his constitution was quite weak ever after.

He resumed his work and carefully piloted the great ship of state safety past many dangerous rocks that jutted out of the Sea of Trouble.

Then came the great upheaval in Government politics. Adams and Hamilton sided against Jefferson in a serious political quarrel. Later on, President Washington was included in the argument which drew many severe criticisms from the press. He was finally reinstated with the public in his showing of fine judgment in settling the quarrel; and became more popular than ever. He announced, however, that he would not consider accepting another four years of office as President.

Went to Mount Vernon.

The leader and "Father of His Country," who brought the Nation through many crucial and trying storms, was tried. His great ship was safe in port with its precious cargo. And so he turned his weary steps toward Mount Vernon; there to rest awhile before going on a longer journey of eternal rest and peace.

Contestants are cautioned again to take sufficient time in which to do their best work and then to send in their essays immediately.

Attention also is called to the booklet available for contestants giving valuable information on the life of George Washington which will be sent by The Post free of charge through the courtesy of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Fill out the blank on this page today, essay contestants, for your copies of the booklet.

PRISONER PRIES WAY OUT OF FAIRFAX JAIL

Escapes During Night After Hearing of Another Warrant for Him.

An antiquated jail at Fairfax, Va., lost another county boarder yesterday, when William H. Lucas, alias Wilbur Lewis, alias Ralph Lewis, a "model" prisoner, pried the bars off a first floor window with outside help and escaped.

The prisoner was serving a term for illegal possession of liquor and had 18 more days to go when he was informed by a trusty that the sheriff held a warrant for his arrest on a felony charge in Leesburg, Va. It is believed this news spurred him to escape.

Lucas is believed to have hidden on top of the cell block under a mattress when the prisoners were locked in their cells for the night.

Early yesterday a car drew up to the jail. The iron bars on the window were pried off.

This is the third escape within a year from the jail. Last May four men dug their way through the wall of a cell and escaped, but were caught several days later. In November a hole was dug in the wall again and four men also escaped. Two of these still are missing. One returned voluntarily the next day and the fourth was captured in Michigan.

Swope Job Plan Urged by Lewis

House Measure Would Also Legalize Labor's Right to Employment.

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to legalize the right to work and put Gerard Swope's plan for employment stabilization on Federal statute books was proposed yesterday by Representative Lewis (Democrat), Maryland. It would use trade associations supervised by the Federal Trade Commission to accomplish this end and will be introduced in the House today.

Lewis is a member of the powerful ways and means committee.

"My bill contemplates introducing the principle of a legalized right to work and equipartition of employment," he said. "It also includes the Swope plan for stabilization of employment, old-age pensions, life insurance, disability insurance and unemployment insurance.

"These benefits, under the Swope plan, would go to workers having a job. But the Swope program, otherwise excellent, makes no provision for 'the men at the gate,' for the disemployed. My bill does."

Maj. William M. King, 99, Outdoors Advocate, Dies

U. S. Employe for 30 Years Succumbs in Ballston to Hurts in Fall.

WILLIAM M. KING.

Maj. William M. King, 99-year-old advocate of moderate living to prolong life, died last night at the home of his son-in-law, Dr. W. C. Welburn, at Ballston, Arlington County, Va.

Maj. King, who confidently expected to pass the century mark through strict adherence to the primary rules of health, suffered injuries last year in a fall. He led an outdoor life and was interested in the Boy Scout movement. He had been a resident of Ballston for the past 40 years and was active in agricultural circles, being appointed as the honorary master of Potomac Grange, No. 1, of Washington, during this time. He served with the Hospital Corps in the War Between the States.

He served in the Department of Agriculture for 30 years, beginning his service in 1885, and was considered an authority on agriculture and horticulture.

His views on modern life, as well as his active participation in community functions, indicated an alertness of one many years his junior. He favored prohibition enforcement, advocated strict immigration laws, frowned on feminine smoking and followed the old maxim: "Early to bed and early to rise."

His daughter, wife of Dr. Welburn, is his only survivor.

GOLD ISSUE IS HELD SOUTH AFRICA PERIL

His Nation Has Her Back to Wall, Louw Informs Woman's Party.

(United Press.)

South Africa has "her back to the wall" in a fierce struggle against British financial and political pressure, being brought on her to abandon the gold standard, Eric Louw, South African minister here, said in an address before the National Woman's Party meeting yesterday.

After pointing out that his government could have followed the line of least resistance by abandoning the gold standard, Mr. Louw said it had decided to try to weather the financial storm without a change.

"Enormous pressure is being brought to bear upon the government from all sides—internal and external," he said. "Powerful interests in Great Britain have been exerting pressure for political as well as for financial reasons and the same applies to financial interests in South Africa."

So far, Mr. Louw declared, the government has resisted these efforts, but "it is fighting with its back to the wall."

He added the financial position of South Africa is better than that of most countries, pointing out the nation still has a favorable trade balance and its agricultural and manufacturing industries have enjoyed a steady growth and development.

"We possess vast natural resources, agricultural and mineral," Louw said, "and there is the further important fact that we produce 55 per cent of the world's gold.

"Having regard to all these facts, the government has decided that it would not be in the interests of a young and growing country like South Africa to abandon the gold standard, thereby tying herself to the depreciated currency of Great Britain."

Mr. Louw recently attracted considerable attention here when in a speech he recommended that South Africa renounce her membership in the League of Nations.

WOMEN GIVE THRILL AS AIR RACES CLOSE

10,000 Look On as Ladybirds Do Stunts; Program Loses $20,000.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Civilian and service planes roared a finale today to four days of spectacular air racing and stunting at the All-American air meet here.

Women pilots supplied an extra thrill as the races ended before approximately 10,000 spectators. Cuban army fliers took to the air to give the first bit of foreign flying since the meet started.

Competition in the Bridgeport, Conn., Trophy race, plans for which were originated by Miamians, with all planes of the same size and horsepower, offered the greatest thrill of the day. It was won by C. B. Huffman, Cincinnati, at 114.414 miles an hour. Howard Ailor, Troy, Ohio, was right on Huffman's heels with Tex Lagrone, Kansas City, third. All flew Wacos.

The Freddie Lund Trophy, donated this year by the City of Miami in honor of the stunt pilot who was killed last year and offered for the best aerobatic display, was won by R. L. Brooks, New York, in a monocoupe.

Special Cuban Race.

John H. Wright, Utica, N. Y., in a monocoupe, won a special Cuban race for which the prize was a silver sombrero. Wright averaged 146.195 miles an hour over the 15-mile course. Miles J. Vernon, New York, was second in a Waco, and D. E. Richmond, Miami, in a Travelaire, was third.

Mrs. Art Davis, Lansing, Mich., flying a Davis plane, won a special race for a trophy donated by President and Senora Machado of Cuba. Mrs. Betty Lund, Lyons, Ill., in a Waco, was second, and Helen Fitzgerald, Binghamton, N. Y., in a Travelaire, was third.

The other women's event was won by Miss Fitzgerald, as she flew her Geebee Sportster 138.932 miles an hour over the 15-mile course. The event was limited to 125-horsepower planes. M. S. Lund was second in a Monocoupe, and Mrs. Art Davis, third.

Averages 165.8 Miles an Hour.

Art Davis, Lansing, Mich., won the Cincinnati Trophy race over the 15-mile course in his Waco, at an average of 165.8 miles an hour. Doug Davis, Atlanta, in a Travelaire, was second, and Karl Volter, Pittsburgh, third in a Travelaire.

E. J. Detner, Tarrytown, N. Y., in a Travelaire, won the Sportsmen's Pilot race, over 15 miles, at a speed of 127.82 miles an hour. Dexter E. Richmond, Miami, in a Travelaire, was the only other entrant.

AUTOMOBILE KILLS ALEXANDRIA WOMAN

Mrs. Virginia C. Wenk Struck on Way to Church; Driver, Capital Man, Held.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Mrs. Virginia C. Wenk, 52 years old, of 1016 Duke street, Alexandria, was struck and instantly killed last night by an automobile driven by Joseph H. Castonguay, 19 years old, of 30 Sixteenth street southeast, Washington.

Mrs. Wenk was on her way to a meeting of the Baptist Young People's Union. She had come east on Duke street to Washington street and was crossing in front of the First Baptist Church when struck. She was picked up by Castonguay and Albert Baluh, of the Army Dental School, Washington, and taken to the Alexandria Hospital, but was dead when she arrived there, her neck being broken. The body was taken to Wheatley's undertaking establishment.

Sergt. George Everly and Policemen Wesley Snoots, George Embrey and Russell Hawes questioned Castonguay, who at first claimed the woman had been struck by a car which was ahead of him, giving the police a description of the car. Policeman Snoots, who is a motorcycle officer, drove in the direction of Washington, but could not locate a car such as described and returned. Castonguay was then placed under arrest and taken to police headquarters, and upon arrival there admitted that it was his machine that struck Mrs. Wenk. In the car with him were Elmer Harding, of 57 New York avenue northwest, Washington; Miss Frances Sowers, of 1417 Massachusetts avenue northwest, Washington, and Miss Beulah Sowers, of 1423 East Capitol street, Washington.

Castonguay is being held pending a coroner's inquest, which will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon; Harding is being held as a witness and the two girls were released and instructed to appear for the inquest.

Castonguay's car was one of three in a party which was coming from Fredericksburg. The occupants of several other machines which stopped at the scene of the accident are said to have informed the police that Castonguay was speeding and driving recklessly before reaching Alexandria.

Mrs. Wenk has no relatives in Alexandria, but has two sisters living in Charlottesville.

Mrs. Florence Clift Dies in Alexandria

Was Past Grand Worthy Matron of Virginia Eastern Star.

Mrs. Florence Henderson Clift, wife of Percy E. Clift, died suddenly Saturday evening at her home, 217 North Columbus street, Alexandria, as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Clift was found by her husband, who summoned Dr. Llewellyn Powell and he pronounced her dead. Mr. Clift had left the house earlier to go with a delegation from Alexandria to Manassas, Va., to attend a Masonic gathering, and owing to the stormy weather, turned back. Mrs. Clift had been in failing health for several months. She had been out in the afternoon in connection with her work in the United Charities.

Mrs. Clift was past grand worthy matron of the Eastern Star in Virginia, and it was during her term in 1924-25 that the Eastern Star Home in Richmond was originated. She was also past worthy matron of Martha Washington Chapter, No. 42, Eastern Star, of Alexandria; a member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; the Woman's Benefit Association of the Maccabees; Liberty Rebekah Lodge of Odd Fellows; for twelve years treasurer of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and also a worker in the Alexandria United Charities.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall. Burial will be in the Presbyterian Cemetery with Eastern Star rites. The body will be at the Wheatley funeral home until taken to the church.

Decline in Sunspots Seen Aiding Radio Fans in 1932

(Associated Press.)

Happy days for radio fans in 1932 were predicted by an astronomer yesterday because sunspots will be on the decline.

New evidence that radio transmission is best when sunspots are fewest was described by Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, noted student of the heavens, in a report to the American Astronomical Society just made public.

Intensity of radio reception has increased fourfold during the last nine months, and sunspots have been correspondingly on the decline during that period, said Dr. Stetson, who is director of the Perkins Observatory at Delaware, Ohio.

Sunspots actually are great electromagnetic storms on the surface of the sun. They send out streams of electrons that bombard the earth's atmosphere, according to the Stetson theory, causing changes that interfere with radio broadcasts. The fewer the sunspots, the less the bombardment.

Sunspots increase and decrease through regular cycles. During the last period of maximm sunspots, 1926-1929, Dr. Stetson predicted radio reception would improve as the spots declined through 1930-1931. The prediction, he said, has been "remarkably fulfilled." Since sunspots are due to go on decreasing in 1932, he predicts good broadcasting conditions during that period.

EPISCOPAL GROUPS TO OUTLINE RELIEF

Will Meet With District's Representatives Today on Jobless Plans.

The unemployment relief program of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, recently formulated by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be launched at a meeting today of a women's committee, representing the 61 parishes of the city, and officials of the District of Columbia employment committee.

At the meeting, which will be held in the boardroom of the District of Columbia Building at 11:30 o'clock, Col. E. Goring Bliss, chairman of the work creation subcommittee, and Mrs. Clara W. Smith, executive secretary of the women's division, of the District employment committee, will outline the unemployment aid plans of their organization to the parish representatives. According to the program planned by Bishop Freeman, each Episcopal parish in Washington will immediately inaugurate steps to create as much work for jobless persons as possible and to organize men's and women's committees in their respective districts to render aid and relief to needy and deserving families suffering from unemployment or underemployment.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of 1737 K street northwest, and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, wife of the cathedral canon, have been selected to make the arrangements with the women delegates at the meeting to launch a comprehensive and definite program of work in each parish. This work will include not only the creation of jobs but also the furnishing of food and other necessities to unemployment victims and regular meetings of women to sew on clothing.

Characterizing the present economic situation as comparable to the World War crisis, Bishop Freeman believes that Washington women should perform organized sewing of clothing to aid unemployment, just as they did for the Army and Navy in the days of 1917-18.

Every rector of a Washington parish has been requested by Bishop Freeman to appoint a man and a woman to an interparochial committee to cooperate with the Episcopal City Missions, 1329 K street northwest, and other civic relief agencies with the objective of bringing together the people in the parishes who may be in a position to furnish work, even of a temporary or occasional nature, to the persons in need of employment. This committee is being organized and is expected to be functioning in the near future.

The steamship, Ponce, missing for sixteen days between San Juan, Porto Rico and New York, was towed into Hamilton, Bermuda, by the German steamer, Elizabeth Rickmers. The entire crew and all passengers on board, for whom hope had been about abandoned are in good health.

Daniel N. Morgan, formerly Treasurer of the United States, had been elected president of the new United States Trust Co. of Washington. The greater part of the bank's capital stock of $1,000,000 has already been subscribed.

The debate as to whether or not Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, would be seated in the Senate continued with the defense scoring several important points.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at a small informal dinner. Among the guests were Edward B. McLean, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Lieut. Russell Train.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

JANUARY STUDY.

What's that in the alley? See!
Can it be a Christmas tree,
Now so faded, dry and bare,
Shorn of all its trinkets fair,
Tossed into an alleyway
Where not even children play,
There to rest upon its side
Till it's taken for a ride.

II.

What a break, oh Christmas tree,
Once bedecked so brilliantly!
Now rejected you appear,
Tossed aside without a tear,
Stripped of all your raiment bright,
Shorn of every candle light;
Desolation in each bough—
Shunned by even kiddies now!

III.

Only yesterday, it seems,
You were part of children's dreams;
You were then a symbol grand
Through the reaches of the land
Of a love that, come what may,
Never, never fades away . . .
Can it be that folks are through
In so short a time with you?

IV.

Just a little while ago
You, bejeweled, all aglow,
Spread the story and the faith;
Now you're just a Christmas wraith!
Yesterday the joy of all—
Now you wait the ashman's call;
Soon, a withered, battered stump,
You'll end on a public dump!

L'envoi.

Such is life and such is fate;
In your hour you were great;
Mankind's loves are not too strong—
You were good to last that long!

MONDAY JANUARY 11, 1932 SPORTS

MAC SMITH ADDS 68 TO HOLD LEAD IN COAST GOLF

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

MR. ALAN GOULD, who as general sports editor of the Associated Press probably influences public opinion among the Nation's fans to a greater degree than any other individual, is making an interesting survey of the sports field of the past, present and future, and has propounded for sports editors of member papers of the Associated Press a series of questions upon which will be based a comprehensive report dealing with many phases of athletics, amateur and professional.

The depth and breadth of Mr. Gould's survey is attested by the following questions he has submitted:

1. What are the three most popular sports, in order, taking playing activity as well as fan interest into consideration?

2. Taking the four major factors involved in any big sport into consideration, what sport requires:
(a) The most skill?
(b) The most strength (or stamina)?
(c) The most strategy?
(d) The most luck?

3. Among the outstanding prospective sports features for 1932, which would you prefer to see or cover?

4. What have been the three most exciting or thrilling events you have ever witnessed or covered?

This department today is setting down its opinions on the above questions for posterity either to accept or reject.

The three most popular sports in their order are not hard to arrive at.

My first choice is golf, both in the player interest and fan interest. It has been the experience of this column that the golf bug bites deeper and harder into the personality of the player and the fan, especially the player, than the toxin of any other sport.

In a sport where the average game of the average player is 20 above par, the game must have a tremendous appeal for the devotee who is content to plod along so far without the pale of proficiency. The forces of golf have been the greatest enemy of the forces of baseball, emptying the stands of many fans who formerly followed the national pastime.

Baseball's grip on the populace holds second place in popularity among the Nation's sports despite the fact that the great bulk of the interest is fan interest and thus noncompetitive. Baseball's ability to draw heavily every day that weather permits the game over a period of six months is an argument that is hard to outweigh.

Against the claim of tennis and horse racing, this column accords football third place in point of popularity, despite the fact that the competitive interest in the sport does not constitute one-half of 1 per cent of the fan interest. But football's ability to capture the imagination of the country on every week-end during the fall earns the gridiron sport the palm.

Question No. 2, with its four divisions, presents a wide latitude for choice.

What sport requires the most skill?—Tennis.

What sport requires the most strength (or stamina)?—Boxing.

What sport requires the most strategy?—Football.

What sport requires the most luck?—Golf.

The debate upon the above subjects will rage on until eternity among the respective devotees of their respective sports, and this column realizes that it is now on the defensive.

Among the outstanding prospective sports features for 1932 which this department would prefer to see or cover, I set down unqualifiedly that the Olympic games at Los Angeles promise to be the greatest spectacle in the entire annals of sports, and would be my choice.

The final question (What have been the most exciting or thrilling events you ever witnessed or covered) leave the field wide open again, but there are three incidences in the memory of this department that do stand out as supreme thrills. They are:

1. Gene Tunney sniffing in the resin on the floor of the ring at Chicago in 1927, taking full advantage of a lucky count of 14 while the shaggy-haired Jack Dempsey, in a neutral corner, barely restrains himself from leaping across the length of the ring to deal out the finishing punches.

2. The score tied in the last half of the ninth inning of the world series at New York in the same year. Pitcher John Miljus, of the Pirates, fills the bases with Yankees. He strikes out Ruth for the first out. He fanned Gehrig for the second. He makes Tony Lazzeri miss widely at two strikes. He works the count to three and two. And then he unlooses a wild pitch that scores the runner from third and gives the Yankees the game and the series in four straight. The strangest climax of any sports event.

3. Walter Johnson's pitching in the final game of the world series between Washington and the Giants in 1924. His feat of passing Ross Young intentionally with men on bases to bring Long George Kelly to bat and then fanning Kelly with his blinding speed. Johnson repeating the same performance two innings later to blast the Giants' hopes of victory.

The Lumberjacks took the measure of the Laurel Reserves in a thrilling basket ball game played at Laurel yesterday. The final score was 22-20. Coates and Dix led the winners, while Bauer was best for the Reserves.

Loyola Plays Maryland Tonight

Real Fight Promised in Final Game in Ritchie Gym.

Gallaudet at C. U., G. W. vs. Marines at Quantico.

THE farewell intercollegiate basket ball game in Ritchie Gymnasium at College Park will be played tonight by Maryland University's cagers when they engage the strong Loyola of Baltimore quintet starting at 8 o'clock. When the Old Liners again take the floor in a home appearance they will be trying out the boards in their new field house, the date of this occasion being January 20, when they will oppose Navy.

While Maryland and Loyola are battling, Catholic University will be entertaining Gallaudet College at Brookland. The latter contest gets under way at 8:30. George Washington's five also competes tonight, meeting the Marines at Quantico, Va.

Maryland Plays Twice In Lexington.

Maryland will play two other contests prior to the dedication of the new athletic plant, but both will be staged in Lexington, Va., with Washington and Lee and V. M. I., on Friday and Saturday, respectively. The new building will be named Ritchie Field House. Gov. Albert C. Ritchie will be among the prominent persons to take part in the dedication ceremonies. The field house will seat 4,262 persons for basket ball and will accomodate about 6,000 when used for boxing, or as an auditorium. The floor in the playing hall is 131 feet long and 56 feet wide. The court is 89 feet long and 45 feet wide, giving a margin of 5½ feet between the playing space and the seats, and 16 feet at each end.

Maryland is anxious to close Ritchie gym victoriously, not only for sentimental reasons but because it wishes to settle an old score with Loyola. It was the Baltimore team that handed the Old Line its first defeat of last season, 33 to 30. Incidentally, Maryland last year lost only four games in 22 played.

Indications are that the host team will succeed in its aim, as all of the players who helped to win the Southern Conference championship last winter are again in uniform and in addition several capable sophomores are on hand, while Loyola has lost the high-scoring Twardowicz. Maryland's defeat by Wisconsin in an overtime contest last month at Madison has not detracted from the high regard in which Coach Shipley's combination has been held since practice was inaugurated.

Vincent, Buscher May Break Into Line-up.

Two sophomores, Vincent, center, and Buscher, guard, are likely to break into the starting line-up tonight, displacing Norris and May of last year's five. Chalmers and Ronkon forwards, and Berger, guard, are the veterans slated to start.

Catholic will be out to atone for a surprise beating absorbed last year from Gallaudet when the Blues invaded the Brookland gym with one of the strongest quints in their history. The Florida Avenue squad, however, has since lost the services of Del Cosgrove, Johnny Ringle and Konrad Hokanson, a trio of keen sharpshooters, and as yet has been unable to locate capable successors. Catholic, on the other hand, has improved.

Catholic will start a revamped lineup composed of Sheary and Whelan at forwards; McVean, center, and White and Spinelli, guards. Gallaudet's opening array will be Jensen and Brown, forwards; Walnoha, center, and Monaghan and Rayhill, guards.

George Washington's formidable outfit defeated the Marines here last week and has high hopes of repeating, although the Leathernecks will enjoy the advantage of playing on their home court.

Fourteen other games are found on this week's schedule for Capital collegiate quintets with the Georgetown-St. John's of Brooklyn clash occupying the feature spot Friday night.

Major Leaguers Would Aid Minors

Billy Evans, of Tribe, Acts as "Co-Operator" at Louisville Meeting.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Five representatives of minor baseball leagues and a "cooperator" from the majors met in executive session, the first of a series, here this afternoon and considered plans to rehabilitate the smaller leagues. An hour of the session, first of a series to be held in various sections of the country, was devoted to working out a plan for cooperative buying of baseball equipment.

W. G. Bramham, of Durham, N. C., president of the Piedmont League, presided and the "cooperator" was Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Representatives of practically every manufacturer of baseball equipment were on hand and all were given an opportunity to make suggestions. Decision in the cooperative buying plan was withheld for further study and the committee went into other phases of its work.

Committee, appointed at the West Baden meeting of minor leagues in December, has been charged with the duty of rehabilitating the minor leagues. One of the important items on its calendar was formation of new leagues and it was considered likely the group would appoint a full-time organizer for this purpose.

SAKS BEATEN IN UPSET BY POTOMACS

Boat Club Five Leads All the Way to Win, 30 to 22.

LEADING from start to finish, the Potomac Boat Club unlimited basket ball team scored the most startling upset recorded in local court circles this season when it defeated the hitherto undefeated Saks Clothiers by a score of 30-22 in a District Amateur League game before a large crowd at the Boys' Club yesterday. Coming as it did on the heels of Saks' victory over the Quantico Marines, the defeat of the Clothiers was even more surprising.

The Boat Club astounded even its most ardent supporters by taking the bit in its teeth and assuming the lead at the outset of the fray never to be headed. Barker, with 13 points to his credit, Cunningham with 8, and Johnson with 6, were the leaders in the uprising.

Saks Showed Effects of Marine Battle.

Saks plainly showed the effects of its fight with the Marines the previous night. Bernie Jones, sharpshooting forward, was not up to his usual standard, and Fisher, Lucas and Hook were sadly lacking in their goal-shooting ability.

The Clothiers cracked wide open in the third period when their opponents sank three field goals in rapid succession, Only the ejection of Barker and Johnson in the fourth period on personal fouls saved the losers from a worse defeat.

German Hockey Team Spurns Expense Money

Berlin, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—The German Hockey Association today decided not to accept an offer from the United States to pay the expenses of a German team in the winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N. Y., next month. Germany, thus will not be represented in hockey competition.

Some time ago the German Olympic Association announced it would not send a hockey team to compete at Lake Placid, partly because of financial reasons and partly because it felt Germany had no chance to win or even make a good showing. Later it was announced an offer had been made by American organizations to defray the expenses of the team.

VICS VICTORS BY SINGLE POINT

Broadway Five Rally Falls Short as D. C. Team Wins, 36-35

A ROUND-SHOULDERED, blond little Jewish boy, Solly Bertman, of Philadelphia, kept some 200-odd fans in an uproar yesterday at Silver Spring Armory as Vic's Sport Shopmen narrowly managed to defeat the Broadway Theatricals, of Quakertown, by 36 to 35.

Bertman, playing a forward position for the visitors, eluded the Vic guards seven times to keep his team up in the running, and in the meantime managed to sink five foul shots in seven tries to amass an afternoon's total of 19 points. His performance was the best seen in a semipro game here this season from a scoring standpoint.

Quakers Miss Few Opportunities.

Using two men at all times under the basket on theDehnert pivot play, the Vicmen were brilliant in their ability to secure shots with their short, in-an-out passing attack, but were unable to sink them with the proficiency of the Philadelphians, who made good on most of their opportunities.

With Artie Boyd, Tech High mentor, handling the whistle, the game was roughly but cleanly played and produced 40 minutes of fast and furious action. Although the Broadway five was never able to take the lead, the local semipros were unable also to make much headway, the score at half being 21-20.

The Vics' lead grew to 8 points as

Pegler Recalls Boomtime In Florida as Ball Clubs Prepare for Trek South

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The ball clubs will be going south pretty soon, some of them to visit again in Florida the scene of some of the craziest events this country ever saw, the boom-time real estate development and the sport productions which served as a come-on for the promotion. It was impossible to appreciate the hilarious folly of the whole scenario at the time, although I do think most of the people who were buying chips in the game there had a premonition that the trading in 25-foot home site lots in mangrove bog and on palmetto flat, at prices greater in many cases than the quotations for property in big firm cities, would prove to be unsound business.

I sensed the boom first when I went to Miami in the winter of, I think, 1925, trailing Harry M. Daugherty, then the Attorney General of the United States, who was in some trouble over the affairs of his department. Mrs. Daugherty was seriously ill, this being the sole reason for Harry's trip to Florida, and they put up at a quiet but amazingly expensive hotel on Miami Beach, which was just beginning to boom. The rate for a single room at this hotel was $35 a day and my innate frugality rebelled at this, even though I was traveling on an expense account.

So I made a deal with Mr. Daugherty. I told him that if he would give me his word to notify me when and where he was going I would let him alone and he agreed. I then found a room on the mainland in a hotel only recently put together of laths, two-by-fours, and pink mud, for $12 a day without bath, but with a tiny cell and a canvas curtain for a shower bath.

A pair of white duck shoes cost $19. The juice of Florida oranges was 50 cents a slug of about two ounces in the sorriest luncheries, and even the bellhops in this little hotel were trading in a kind of paper called options or binders and making overnight profits.

I became acquainted with a cub reporter on one of the Miami papers who was jabbering excitedly all the time about business property and development sites and making trades on his own account day and night as he rattled around the place in a little car, jotting down items, mainly about real estate transfers and building materials, for his paper. He offered to send me in on an opportunity which he himself was unable to take advantage of at the moment, in which a thousand dollars would make me ten thousand in 30 days. I didn't believe it then, but I firmly believe it now.

After a few days Mr. Daugherty decided to return to Washington, and,

Notre Dame's Comeback Forecast

1931 Losses Relieved Tension; 30 of First Squad Return.

Kirksey Predicts Irish Will Be Undefeated; Schedule Shifted.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—With apologies for writing about football in January, this seems to be a good time to survey calmly the Notre Dame football situation.

Replaced by Southern California as national football champion, beaten twice and tied once, Notre Dame received a severe jolt to its gridiron prestige in "the first year after Rockne."

It was more of a shock to the football world generally, and Notre Dame supporters in particular, because of the manner in which the Irish supremacy ended. Notre Dame had won 25 straight games, excluding a tie, and led Southern California 14 to 0 at the end of the third period, when the tide of battle turned against the Irish for the first time in three years.

Southern California won, 16 to 14, and then Army followed with a decisive 12-to-0 victory, the first time since 1928 and the second time in 26 years that the Irish had lost two football games in succession.

Can the Irish Come Back?

Then football fans from coast to coast asked the logical question, "Is Notre Dame football supremacy over for all time? Can the Irish come back without Rockne?"

When dusk gathers around the Los Angeles coliseum next December 10 Notre Dame again will be undefeated national football champion, in the writer's opinion.

There are many reasons for making such a prediction, but the four paramount ones are:

2—The 1932 schedule.
3—Last season's defeats.
4—Hartley Anderson's coaching.

Elaborating briefly, Notre Dame has back 30 of the 37 players on the first squad last year. Capt. Yarr, Schwartz and Hoffman are the only three regulars who will not return, and there are many players ready to step up and take their places. As good as Schwartz was, Notre Dame has three left half backs, who, between them, should be able to fill the vacant spot.

The schedule is ideally arranged with Haskell, Drake, Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, Kansas, Northwestern, Navy, Army and Southern California, to be played in that order. There will be no crucial game on the second Saturday as was the case last year, when Notre Dame and Northwestern helped "kill each other off" by pointing for their October 10 game.

If any one thinks last season's defeats hurt Notre Dame morale, note the following from the Notre Dame Alumnus for December:

"At last Notre Dame has met defeat. Success had placed upon Knute Rockne a crown that had become heavy indeed before that beloved head was bowed in death. It placed upon Notre Dame a stamp of infallibility that no team could rightfully carry. It had brought the boys a tension unjust to those ends that football best serves.

Defeats Relieve Tension.

"The defeats were glorious. The tension is relieved. The football world is back to earth, and the alumnus predict Jesse Harper, Hunk Anderson, his assistant, and the players will find it a better place in which to live."

While Notre Dame promises to be stronger next year, Southern California loses all but five of the eleven men who started the Notre Dame game, including the entire back field of Shaver, Pinckert, Mallory and Musick.

Durand's Great Finish Wins in Florida Golf

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Par golf in the afternoon, after having been six down at the close of the morning round today gave Celest Durand, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a one-up victory over Tommy Goodwin, of Monroe, N. Y., and West Palm Beach, in the finals of the Miami midwinter amateur golf tournament.

It was a beautiful recovery by Durand, as Goodwin slipped to 40—39—79 for the afternoon round after taking 39—35—74 this morning. Durand's afternoon medal was 35—36—71, par for the Miami Country Club course, against 40—41—81 for the first half of the round.

In the second flight final Pete Bailey, of Miami, defeated Garfield Miller, Pelham, N. Y., 7 and 5. Lee Chase, jr., of Buffalo, N. Y., won the third flight with a 4 and 3 victory over J. B. Huhn, New York; W. L. (Pa) Stribling lost the fourth flight finals to John H. Stillman, of Lakeville, N. Y., 2 and 1.

Schmeling and Walker Signing Is Due Today

New York, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Contracts for the 15-round heavyweight championship bout between Max Schmeling and Mickey Walker will be signed tomorrow, Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of Madison Square Garden, announced today.

The fight will be held at Miami, Fla., February 25.

Ace Hudkins Arrested, Charged With Assault

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Ace Hudkins, middleweight boxer, was arrested early today on a charge of assault to do bodily harm after T. Leonard Park, 38, had received a fractured skull in a street altercation.

The police report said Park and E. S. Martin objected to the honking of an automobile horn by Hudkins' companion, Ellen Dorsey, and that both Park and Martin were knocked down by the pugilist.

Schmeling Ranked Highest by "Ring"

Magazine Says Sharkey Is Hope of U. S. to Regain Crown.

New York, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Max Schmeling, of Germany, is accorded boxing's highest honor in the annual ranking of the world's boxers for 1931 announced today by The Ring, boxing magazine.

Schmeling is listed as king of the heavyweights as a result of the decisive victory he scored over Young Stribling in defense of the title he won from Jack Sharkey on a foul. Sharkey is ranked as the second best battler in the division.

Fighters accorded titular recognition in the other divisions by the magazine are:

Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight.
Dave Shade, middleweight.
Lou Brouillard, welterweight.
Tony Canzoneri, lightweight.
Kid Chocolate, junior lightweight.
Bat Battalino, featherweight.
Al Brown, bantamweight.
Midget Wolgast, flyweight.

The Ring's rankings were based on the consensus of the selections of more than 100 sports editors and correspondents.

The Ring's selections as the ten fighters who showed the most promise last year were Schaaf, heavyweight; Billy Jones, Philadelphia, light heavyweight; Young Terry, Trenton, N. J., middleweight; Brouillard, welterweight; Toney Herrera, El Paso, junior welterweight; Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids, Mich., lightweight; Roger Bernard, Detroit, junior lightweight; Nel Tarlton, England, featherweight; Pete Sanstol, Norway, bantamweight, and Perez, flyweight.

Veteran Is 5 Under Par With 137

Hagen and Diegel in Group Tied for 2d at Los Angeles.

Mackenzie Among 7 Amateurs to Survive in Open.

By BRIAN BELL.

HILLCREST COUNTRY CLUB, Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (A.P.).—Macdonald Smith, after softening up the Hillcrest Country Club's golf course yesterday with a sensational 69, added a 68 today and just about finished the destruction of the layout's morale. His total of 137 for the first 36 holes of the Los Angeles open championship placed him five strokes below par and the same number in front of the field.

The Great Scotch stylist might well have had a 65 instead of 68 today. Three times his putts hit the backs of cups and remained out, when they could easily have fallen in. Then on the sixteenth green, after sending his tee shot well on, he allowed for a break of the green when the break was not there, and had to take three putts, an unusual performance for Mac Smith when he is putting. This was the only hole where the Carnoustie man was over par.

Holes Out From Off Green.

His only piece of real luck came when he holed out from slightly off the green on the eleventh for a birdie three, a great shot to be sure, but one that would not go in many times. He had four birdies.

His cards:

Par (out)... 434 543 444—35
Smith (out) 334 543 443—33
Par (in).... 443 454 345—36—35—71
Smith (in).. 433 454 444—35—33—68

There was a scramble for the temporary runner-up position. Leo Diegel, for the second time in two days, whirled his way around the course in exactly par figures—71—and his 142 was equaled by Walter Hagen, a contemporary of Mac Smith, who did the same, 71—71.

Dallas Jeffers, of Santa Ana, Calif., and Olin Dutra, Santa Monica, two sure shooting Californians, and Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot, went about the accomplishment a bit differently, but achieved the same result, Jeffers following a 70 with 72, Dutra and Kirkwood taking a 70 on a 72.

The field tonight was reduced for the final 36 holes competition tomorrow to 59, this total including all players who scored 150 and better for the first half of the play. George Von Elm, a pretournament favorite, barely slipped in with 149, and Tom Creavy, the champion of the Professional Golfers Association, had an even closer call when he scored 150 even.

Seven Amateurs Qualify.

Seven amateurs qualified to continue to the bitter end, Charlie Seaver, Stanford student, leading this division with 145, thanks to a great 71 today. Roland MacKenzie, Walker Cup player, also scored a 71 today, holing out a full brassie shot for a two at the eleventh hole, getting a total of 147 strokes.

WOLGAST ROSE FROM JANITOR TO CHAMPION IN 4 YEARS

Large Family Supported By Youth

Italian Faces Landers Tomorrow Night at Alexandria.

Burns and Bashara in Semifinal; Brown Bout Is Off.

By JACK ESPEY.

FROM janitor in a gymnasium to king of the flyweights in four years—that was the meteoric rise of Midget Wolgast, the little Philadelphia Italian, who invades Alexandria tomorrow night to do battle with Billy Landers, aggressive blond bantamweight from Norfolk, in the eight-round feature of the Day Nursery's benefit show in Portner's Arena.

It was just four years after he walked into Jimmy Coster's Philadelphia gymnasium and was put on the business end of a broom, that Wolgast, born Joseph Loscalzo, won recognition in March, 1930, as the 112-pound champion by the New York and Pennsylvania boxing commissions on the strength of a fifteen-round victory over Black Bill, dusky Cuban.

Adopts Name of Wolgast.

One of ten children in a poor Italian family, Wolgast soon became an admirer of Bobby Wolgast, accomplished flyweight who retired in 1928, and he adopted the name of his idol when Trainer Coster decided he might develop into a boxer. It was the luckiest day in his life, Wolgast has said, when he happened into Coster's. Before that he had worked as a floor finisher, but the pay was small. His father, a carpenter, was ill when he took up the trail that was to end in his winning the flyweight crown, and his earnings helped to support the family.

Now, as eldest of the children at 23, he supports his brothers and sisters and parents on his ring activities. Altogether, Wolgast has been boxing about six years and has fought more than 150 fights. Boxing experts of New York have classed him as the greatest flyweight since the days of Jimmy Wilde and Pancho Villa.

Wolgast is the first boxing champion scheduled to appear in a bona fide bout before a local audience in ten years. The Day Nursery Athletic Association has guaranteed him a sum for his services larger than any boxer has taken from a bout in this vicinity in five years. And if Landers is lucky, the fans may be witnesses to the unusual sight of a champion absorbing defeat.

The title will not be at stake. Landers is a legitimate bantamweight and can not reduce to the flyweight limit of 112-pounds. The Norfolk lad has agreed to scale no more than 118 pounds at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, or forfeit $100 of his purse. Both he and the champion will weigh at the same time in Riggs Baths, Fifteenth and G streets northwest.

Lauder's Chances Not Bright.

Landers has a chance to win, but his chance is small. That blasting right hand that has stopped Jimmy Tramberia and Eddie Buell and put Frankie McKenna three times on the floor before Capital audiences, is the one weapon with which local experts agree he might beat his more famous opponent.

But the fight should prove keenly interesting as long as it lasts. Both principals are noted for their aggressiveness. Landers is ambitious and therefore may be expected to tear into Wolgast with everything he has. He has the strength to score a knockout and may even win on points if Wolgast's highly educated left hand does not throw up an impenetrable defense. The Italian owns a left jab and hook that know no equals for speed and accuracy in the entire cauliflower industry. He is capable of sustaining a dizzy pace for fifteen rounds. Whether Landers can match the pace in the event he does not put over an early kayo blow is a question.

Landers is scheduled to work out tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in Frankie Mann's Gym, Fifteenth and East Capitol streets. Wolgast's plans are not known.

One change in the program was announced last night. The scheduled eight-rounder between Buster Brown, of Baltimore, and Sammy Braunstein, of this city, has been canceled owing to the fact that Braunstein is suffering a cut lower lip that is stubborn about yielding to treatment. The injury was sustained by the Marine last Tuesday night when he lost to Harry "Kid" Groves.

The substitute bout, which occupies the semifinal spot, will bring together two fast lightweights, Bobby Burns, of Baltimore, and Tommy Bashara, of Norfolk. Burns performed impressively at Alexandria several weeks ago in securing a draw with Sailor McKenna. Bashara sports a fine record, including a four-round knockout over Mickey Morley, Navy champion; a draw with Phil Raymond, highly respected Baltimore lightweight, and decisions over Sid Lampe, Nick Antonelli, Stumpy Jacobs, Lew Raymond, Joe Belmont, Sailor Everhan and Benny Goldstein.

VICS SCORE, 36 TO 35 OVER PHILLY STARS

the final three minutes began, but Little Solly and his mates staged a 7-point rally which ceased as the timer's whistle ended a potential Vic defeat.

Two Joe Sweeneys opposed during the feature. The Philly crew boasted a center by that name.

—Jefferson Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, La., Jan. 10.—The Daily States Purse, an allowance affair, which attracted a field of ten highly regarded sprinters in this 6-furlong dash, will be offered as the star attraction on the program at Jefferson Park tomorrow. The customary large fields of platers have been received in the various supporting events, with several contests expected to furnish some interesting sport over the course.

FLYING DON, a speedy Master Charlie colt, which raced creditably last season in New York, has been freshened up by this brief rest, and is reported in splendid condition. The colt appears to be a standout in the main event. CAMP DOUGLAS, a triple winner at this track, should furnish the opposition. COLONIAL BELLE is favored over the others for the minor award.

FIRST RACE—SCANDAL SHEET figures to graduate from the maiden ranks. BOTTLED BOURBON and DUSKY BOY are closely rated for the place and show.

SECOND RACE—ELKHART has been training well and should hold his opposition safe. PRINCESS CRUSADER, from the J. Leiter string, is the place selection, with RIVET third.

THIRD RACE—PLAY BIRD, sporting the Lone Star Stable silks, an easy winner last outing, is favored to score over her rivals. GALAHAD raced impressively in the mud the other day and may place, with PROMETHEUS, from the Mrs. Padgett string, as the show choice.

FOURTH RACE—Despite his burden of 117 pounds, DICK MORRIS, a consistent sprinter from the stable of Knebelkamp & Morris, is expected to show the way to this field. ELIZABETH BOLLA and THE OKAH, two steady platers, should battle it out for the remainder of the purse.

SIXTH RACE—GAILLARDIA is selected to annex the purse. This clever colt may encounter stern competition from LIGHT MINT. The latter has shown improvement and is the place selection, with GETTIN EVEN as the show possibility.

SEVENTH RACE—STUPENDOUS scored so easily the other day that the Trojan mare is picked to repeat against her opponents tomorrow. BERNICE VAN, a steady filly, should save the place. ELEANOR M will have ANNE ARUNDEL to beat for the minor prize.

SUBSTITUTE RACE—DIODORO holds a slight edge over COCKRILL for the honors in this emergency event. BRINKLEY is on the improve and figures to extend the top two.

PEGLER SEES CHANGE IN FLORIDA

Recalls Wild Days of Real Estate Boom in Southland.

true to his word, notified me. I went down to the train to see him off. He sat on the edge of his berth in his underwear and, wagging his head said, "This place is crazy."

The boosters of one miraculous subdivision were just beginning to sound their slogan, "Forty miles of waterfront," which later turned out to be the two banks of a meandering groove dug in the land for drainage purposes. The last time I saw it there was a depth of dead water in the ditch with wild hyacinths growing amid the green scum. Workmen of the building trades were hopping from job to job, lured hither and yon by rival contractors and snowballing wages. There were carpenters among them who did not know a beam from a bundle of shingles, and certified plasterers who could only stand off with a trowel and throw the slush at the frames.

There was a jai-alai racket running in Miami even then, and the promoters were having a pleasant time, for they were running a mutuel department and the players were their employes. People who bet on jai-alai are the most trusting of all. Roddy Burdine's department store in Miami was jammed with customers and such was the traffic at the Western Union that sometimes the patrons backed up and had to form a line down the street.

Major Clubs in Towns' Pay.

I went over to Orlando to see the Cincinnati Reds and arrived in time to see Jack Hendricks and some others go to their knees at the bedside of Pat Moran, the manager of the ball club, and repeat the litany for the dying as Pat breathed his last in the little hospital. Johnny Evers was among them. He was manager of the White Sox that spring and had hurried over from Winterhaven. The ball clubs were in receipt of good cash subsidies from the chambers of commerce of the towns in which they trained, and there was very lively bidding for major league teams on the theory that the date line publicity and descriptive stuff wired North to the sport pages would entice customers to Florida.

I suppose it did, because Florida was undeniably sunny and the new houses were very pretty, done in all the tints of the color card and surrounded by flowering hedges, which was all legitimate description. There were twelve major league clubs training in Florida that spring, and half a dozen clubs from the International League and the American Association.

Down at Tampa a golf tournament was arranged for the Florida open championship with a big fund for prizes and most of the great professionals on the ground. They played the first round on a flat course called Palma Ceia, an adjunct of one subdivision, and the next one at a place called Tampa Terrace, where beautiful homes such as only millionaires could operate, and a hotel of astonishing luxury were already built.

Athletes Brought South.

The hotel had a great swimming pool and all the appointments of opulence and idleness. The promoters brought down a lot of famous young girl swimmers, amateurs and pros, and ran a tournament in the pool. The cost being charged to advertising. The clubhouse of the golf course was adorned by idle and apparently wealthy people in summery clothes, drinking rickeys in a refined way. Johnny Farrell won the tournament. The last time I saw the hotel it was boarded up.

Other importers were importing the great professional amateurs of the tennis business at considerable expense to play through improvised tournaments. Bobby Jones, either this year or the year after, came down to get in the real estate game as some sort of executive for an Atlanta firm which was creating another of those millionaire colonies with a voluptuary's dream of a clubhouse and golf course fit to challenge a champion.

A promoter named Taylor built not one golf course, but two, on a coastal expanse outside St. Petersburg and put up a hotel the perfection of which I have never seen equaled, as well as clubhouses and mansions for members of the club. He paid Walter Hagen $25,000 a year to serve as nominal president and live more or less in residence—not as the pro, mind you, but as the decorative head. Hagen even established, as a Florida industry, a factory for the production of golf tools and missiles.

Ball Players Invest In Ground.

Ball players and other athletes with a little money were buying footholds of real estate in subdivisions close to their respective training quarters. Their money was easy-go. John McGraw started a subdivision called Pennant Park, naming his boulevards after famous ball players and got into trouble when the boom crashed. Spittin' Bill Doak, of the Robins, became land rich, quit baseball, lost it back, and only last season was refused a job in the American Association on the ground that, although he was a registered spitter when he last held a job, he had forfeited his right to throw the wet one when he broke his continuity. Bill Klem, the umpire, and Jack Britton, the fighter, were nigh onto being millionaires in property, but the hurricane blew theirs into the glades.

Even Sarasota had a daily newspaper, and Tampa, for a time, had five, all with full leased wire reports. Their daily editions, with the real estate ads, were as fat as Sunday papers, but the advertisers were paying off in real estate options and I. O. U.'s.

Some of the golf courses have gone back to weeds now and I suppose it will be cheaper, in some cases, to let the mansions and clubhouses dissolve into ruin than to pay for men and materials to keep them in repair.

Even in those days it was quite plain that there could never be enough rich people in all the world to occupy all the dream castles and support all the golf clubs and polo clubs which were being built. But everybody was boom crazy and the pity is that, after a while, they had to come to.

Patent Office Upsets Investigators, 38-18

Sid Wallenstein and Hal Kiesel led the way yesterday as Patent Office upset Bureau of Investigation in a Government League scrap staged as a preliminary to the Vic-Broadway Theatrical game, 38 to 18. Scoring 15 and 14 points, respectively, they enabled their club to tie Census for the league leadership.

Fort Myer will engage Naval Hospital at 8 o'clock and Census will tangle with Government Printing Office an hour later on the Bolling Field floor this evening. The Soldiers and Enumerators are both unbeaten.

COMPANY F WINS AGAIN.

Scoring eight points in the extra period, Company F defeated the Phi Beta Zeta quintet by a score of 30-22 in a hotly contested game at Hyattaville yesterday. Troy, Company F center, knotted the count at 22-22 in the final minute of play, making the extra period necessary. Ray Sinclair, Fraternity forward, found the net for nine field goals, but the inability of his mates to score consistently cost his team the victory.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 160

National Photo.

NO picture could portray the rapid development of Washington better than this one, which depicts the portion of the Mall which was once used as a skating rink, long before the municipal pools and tennis courts were installed. The only landmarks which have survived the inexorable onward march of progress are the rest house on the left and the railroad bridge in the right background.

Old residents of the District may remember the small house on the right hidden in the copse of trees as the dwelling place of that choleric and penurious old Scotchman, David Burns, the first capitalist of Washington, whose lovely daughter, Marcia, married the heir to the Van Ness fortunes. However, with the passing of time and the scourge of the elements this historic old homestead has many years passed from the ken of man. In its approximate location may now be seen the statue of John Paul Jones, who with far-seeing eyes watches fleets of phantom ships sail over the smooth expanse of the Tidal Basin.

On the far right has since been erected that deathless memorial to the Great Emancipator Abraham Lincoln. In front of it ripples the shimmering waters of the reflecting pool upon which skaters of a future generation enjoy an afternoon of sport.

FEDERAL EMPLOYES CAUSTICALLY REJECT A. F. L. PEACE MOVE

Executive Council Asserts Green's Course Violated Union Principles.

FURTHER CONFERENCE ON SPLIT IS DECLINED

Rescission of Opposition to Reclassification Law Must Come First.

In a statement replete with caustic criticism of the administration of President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, the executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes yesterday bluntly rejected the latest move by A. F. of L. leaders to heal the split between the two organizations.

"The executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes is unanimously of the opinion that no question is now present for discussion with the American Federation of Labor," the statement said.

"The executive council feels that it is a thousand pities that blundering judgment and an unintelligent and circumscribed outlook should now be characteristic of the American Federation of Labor, a once noble organization which has in the past done so much to set, maintain and raise labor standards in the United States."

President Green was charged with "reprehensible conduct" in "clear violation of the basic principles of trade union organizations" in seeking to split the Federation of Federal Employes when it became clear that the Government workers intended to sever connection with the A. F. of L. because of its repudiation of reclassification legislation deemed essential by the Government employes.

Complications Are Disclosed.

Added significance to the criticism of the leadership of Mr. Green was found in reports brought from all sections of the country by members of the executive council, who gathered here for a national conference.

Several State and city units of the A. F. of L. are seeking to ignore formal severance of relations by the National Federation of Federal Employes and are seeking ways and means of continuing local unions of the Government workers as units of the central labor bodies.

Hundreds of Government workers who have been members of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. but who, heretofore, have not been considered eligible to membership in the National Federation of Federal Employes, now are seeking to join the latter and it has been necessary for the executive council to emphasize membership rules which prohibit acceptance of such members.

The statement of the council disclosed the new peace move by President Green. Following announcement of submission of the referendum to withdraw from the A. F. of L. President Green sought to induce various locals to vote against withdrawal, and when withdrawal was approved by an overwhelming vote of the Government workers Mr. Green announced that his organization would set up a new union for Government employes.

Further Conference Opposed.

The latest move is a proposal for a conference between representatives of the Federal employes and the executive council of the A. F. of L.

"The executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes," its statement said, "declares its unalterable opposition to any conference until such time as a future convention of the A. F. of L. definitely rescinds its mandate at the Vancouver convention in regard to classification for field employes of the Federal Government.

"A detailed survey of the situation by the executive council confirms the judgment of the national officers, resident and nonresident, that withdrawal from the American Federation of Labor under its present leadership was not only desirable but inevitable.

"No fine phrase or honeyed words now coming from President William Green can make up for lack of action at the appropriate time, which was at the Vancouver convention while the subject was under consideration. Mr. Green and his executive council, contrary to the assertions and implications in his correspondence with American Federation of Labor members and National Federation of Federal Employes locals are powerless to modify or change the declared policy and attitude of the American Federation of Labor convention on classification.

"Boring From Within," Charged.

"Instead of dealing with the National Federation of Federal Employes on a basis of cooperation, tolerance and negotiation, Mr. Green at the outset did his utmost to make impossible any future rapprochement by attempting to set up a rival organization for the purpose of destroying the National Federation of Federal Employes.

"Getting no response from the membership of the National Federation of Federal Employes, which proved far too intelligent to be misled by idle words and fatuous phrases into a position of offering opposition to their own leaders and their own program, Mr. Green is now planning to bore from within. A former employe of the National Federation of Federal Employes, discharged for cause, is endeavoring to work up sentiment in favor of a referendum on our relations with the American Federation of Labor.

"The answer of our membership generally to our withdrawal from affiliation with the American Federation of Labor has been the addition of 24 new locals and more than 7,000 members since the referendum was submitted, and a better morale than we have had in all our history."

TWO VICTIMS OF GAS IDENTIFIED BY THREE

Death Certificates Withheld Pending Autopsies Which Are Scheduled Today.

The two men found dead of effects of illuminating gas Saturday night in a rooming house at 612 G street northwest, have been identified as Harry G. Schmidt, 36, and McColen B. Price, 36.

Schmidt was identified tentatively at first through Army discharge papers. Joseph Sparrough, 233 Rhode Island avenue northwest, yesterday made positive identification of Schmidt. Price was identified by his brother, William B. Price, of 833 Eleventh street northeast.

No funeral arrangements had been made last night. Schmidt has no relatives here. He also was identified by Mrs. Katherine Lowen, of 712 D street southwest, with whom he roomed at one time.

While all indications are that the men met death by accident, issuance of a death certificate is being withheld pending autopsies this morning at District Morgue.

REV. F. W. PERKINS PREACHES ON FAITH

Universalist Pastor Explains Use of God in Everyday Work and Service.

"Our highest ideals are promissory notes issued by a spiritual bank," said the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, preaching yesterday at the Universalist National Memorial Church.

"Faith in God means that the bank of issue is solvent," he went on. Dr. Perkins was speaking on the topic, "What Is the Use of God?" his text being drawn from the sixteenth verse of the fourth chapter of John, "God is love, and he that dweleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him.""

"This question expresses the form which distrust or denial of God is most apt to take in the present day. Once the question was, 'Does God Exist?' Instead of man being made in the image of God, is God a fiction projected in the image of man? Today, however, the question is more likely to be, Is God of any practical value?

"Atheism today is not so much an intellectual denial as it is a practical dismissal. Of course, they work out as the same thing. For all practical purposes it makes no difference whether God is a fiction or a useless fact. Nevertheless, I put the question in the form that more accurately reflects the present-day mood," Mr. Perkins went on.

"There is too much that passes for religion which justifies that untruth. It is a wholesome protest against a religion that makes God everything and man a worm of the dust. But that is not religion at its best. There is another and a higher sort that makes God not a substitute for human endeavor, but its inspiration," he said.

"For years the scourge of yellow fever held the Isthmus of Panama in its malignant grip. The work of Gen. Gorgas in eradicating that dread disease was an epoch-making achievement which, more than engineering skill, made possible the Panama Canal.

"But what could Gorgas accomplish if something in the universe had not been ready to respond? If Gorgas had believed that nature was bent on preserving yellow fever as a permanent institution, he would have been beaten at the start, and would never have begun. God would not do the work of the sanitary engineer, but he would reinforce him, and in that sense of reinforcement was his strength.

"I once asked the late Jacob Riis what kept him going in his long and seemingly hopeless fight against the slums of New York. He replied, 'When a man is fighting for decency and a better chance for the other fellow, he is bound to win or somebody after him is bound to win, for God is on that side.' Surely it was no moral weakling who thus revealed the source of his indomitable strength. That is the answer to the question, 'What is the use of God,'" Mr. Perkins concluded.

Louis Busey, 25 years old, colored, of 811 Twenty-fourth street northwest, was shot and instantly killed during a street fight last night at Twenty-third street and Virginia avenue northwest.

Knife Stealer Tells Murder Plan; Victim's Body Found

A colored man rushed into the butcher shop of Samuel Lions, at 1231 Twenty-fifth street northwest, and seized a butcher knife, saying, "I am going to kill some one." He then ran from the place.

Less than an hour later the body of Jack Robinson, 49 years old, colored, of 1326 Twenty-seventh street northwest, was found hacked with a knife, in a vacant lot near the Blue Mouse Theater at Twenty-sixth and N streets northwest.

With information obtained from the proprietor of the butcher store, police arrested Samuel Prater, 38 years old, colored, of 1233 Twenty-fifth street northwest, whose face, according to police, was lacerated at the time of his arrest.

Prater was unable to explain the cuts, and was taken to the Third Precinct Station, where he is held for investigation. Police were unable to find the knife that had been stolen from Lions' store.

CHAMBER'S BANQUET WILL HONOR CURTIS; FETE FILM IS READY

Bicentennial Talkie Is to Be Shown at Anniversary Dinner January 26.

OTHER NOTED GUESTS EXPECTED TO ATTEND

Scenes in Washington's Life to Be Depicted in First Screen Release.

Vice President Charles Curtis will be the guest of honor and speaker at the premier showing of the George Washington Bicentennial Talkie—"Washington—the Man and the Capital," by Lyon Mearson—which will be the feature entertainment at the twenty-fifth anniversary banquet of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, to be held on the night of January 26 at the Mayflower Hotel.

In making this announcement Harry King, chamber president, stated that the Bicentennial Talkie, as produced by Warner Brothers under chamber spontsorship, has been approved by the United States Bicentennial Commission, of which Representative Sol Bloom is associate director, and by the District Bicentennial Commission, of which Dr. George C. Havenner is executive vice chairman.

Will Have Special Guests.

Special guests of the chamber banquet will include Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros, and Clarence Whitehill, barytone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York, who is the star impersonating George Washington in the bicentennial film.

Scenes for the talkie were taken in Washington and at Mount Vernon early last November. They show George Washington in the stirring days of the founding of the republic: his election as first President, and the unfolding under his direction of the L'Enfant plan for the growth and development of the National Capital. The film includes also airplane views of modern Washington and close up shots of its principal public building and monuments.

In addition to Mr. Whitehill, the cast includes Thomas McInerny, as Jefferson; A. J. Herbert, as Alexander Hamilton; Kenneth Daigneau, as James Madison, and Herbert Delmore, as Pierre Charles L'Enfant. After the first showing in Washington the film will be released on February 22 for showing in motion picture houses throughout the country.

Is Outstanding Contribution.

Thomas P. Littlepage, chamber vice president and chairman of the twenty-fifth anniversary banquet committee, states: "Since its establishment May 6, 1907, through the merging of the Business Men's Association and the Jobbers and Shippers Association, the Washington Chamber of Commerce has given special thought to the upbuilding of public pride in our National Capital. Because the bicentennial film is an outstanding contribution to this end we felt that it should be made the principal feature of the chamber's twenty-fifth anniversary banquet."

Associated with Mr. Littlepage on the banquet committee are President King, honorary chairman; Harry T. Peters, vice chairman, and Vice President George A. G. Wood, Martin A. Leese, Malcolm G. Gibbs, George E. Kenelpp, Edward Goring Bliss, Mrs. Caroline B. Stephen, A. Julian Brylawski, Creed W. Fulton, Edmund F. Jewell, Dr. George C. Havenner, Fenton M. Fadeley, Alfred G. Neal and Charles H. Frame.

Woman Is Hunted As Heir to Estate

Recluse Brother, Dead in Baltimore; Sister Is Missing Here.

An inheritance of $9,830 may fall to a Washington woman, Mrs. C. Coleman, it was disclosed when her recluse brother, Frederick Sehmback, died last Wednesday in an ambulance on the way to a hospital in Baltimore. Bank books showing that amount on deposit for Sehmback in Baltimore were found Saturday in the cellar on South Paca street where he lived.

According to police Sehmback had lived the life of a recluse in that section of Baltimore for seventeen years and was employed as a night watchman by several firms in that vicinity. He was taken ill about ten days ago. An ambulance was called Wednesday and he died en route to the hospital.

The police uncovered the bank book when they searched the cellar Saturday in an attempt to find the identity of relatives. The identity of Mrs. Coleman was made through a registered letter she had sent to her brother. Baltimore police asked local authorities to help locate her. The last known address of Mrs. Coleman, believed to be Schemback's only living relative, was 621 K street northwest, but that house has been vacant for some time.

Miss Walter was treated for abrasions and bruises to the face and head, and returned home.

CAPITAL BODY PLANS TO DISTRIBUTE FETE DATA FOR TOURISTS

Board of Trade Committee and Virginia Chamber Agree on Method.

GROUPS WILL EXCHANGE CELEBRATIONS REPORTS

Arrangements for Service Made at Meeting Held in Charlottesville.

Plans have been completed for a rapid interchange of information about bicentennial celebrations between the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce and the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

The arrangement was completed Saturday at the all-Virginia publicity conference by Robert Nelson, of the Virginia organization, and Curtis Hodges, of the Greater National Capital Committee, in Charlottesville.

The purpose is to have available, at all possible places, information for the visitor in the East in regard to all bicentennial celebrations.

Holds Interests Mutual.

Mr. Hodges, addressing the conference, spoke of the mutuality of interests existing between Washington and Virginia. It is a good thing for the Nation, he said, for as many persons as possible each year to visit the National Capital and Virginia. Therefore publicity sources in both places, he said, should be supplied with full information.

Thought was expressed in the meeting that of all the States Virginia is richest in history and natural scenery and that Virginia has not properly cashed in on these assets. Holly Stover, of Washington, at the luncheon that was given in connection with the conference, spoke of plans for "selling" the historic State of Virginia.

Frank E. Turin, of Norfolk, introduced a resolution recommending that the Legislature appropriate $50,000 to help defray the expenses of bicentennial celebrations. It was adopted.

Will Encourage Tourists.

"A ship doesn't change its port in a day," said Mr. Turin, "but a tourist can get to Washington and change his mind about coming on into Virginia." O. E. Camp, secretary of the Bicentennial Commission, of Fredericksburg, said that city has nineteen dates all connected with the history of Washington and all of which will be celebrated.

Representatives at the conference in Charlottesville came from all of the larger cities of Virginia and all reported that work is going on now looking toward attractive programs in the State that gave George Washington to the Nation.

The Virginia Garden Club will take a hand in the celebration all over the State and repreesentatives of this organization attended the conference. Mr. Nelson, who called the meeting, presided and led a discussion on the question of how the radio can be employed in giving publicity to Virginia.

Birth Control Held Wrecker of Homes

Dominican Preacher Says It Is Tending Back to Paganism.

"A survey of the Nation might be profitably spent in showing how Nation-wide and lustful practice of birth control and the disgrace of marriage are dragging the home back to the paganism from which Christ salvaged it," the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., noted Dominican preacher, said yesterday in the Washington Catholic Radio Hour over Station WOL.

"These practices," he said, "are destroying the power of the home, which it has always exercised under Christ—the power of acting as the great educative agency, the greatest mental and moral trainer of childhood that civilization has ever possessed." Father Smith's sermon was broadcast from the Immaculate Conception Church.

The blessing of the sick and the Lourdes procession took place at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes, in the church. Benediction was celebrated. The Rev. Francis J. Hurney, pastor of the church, presided.

Woman Hit by Trolley Improves at Hospital

The condition of Mrs. Mary Elliott, 21, of 1329 Eleventh street, who was pinned under a street car Saturday night as she left her home to join her husband in their car, parked across the street, is improving, according to physicians at Emergency Hospital. It was found necessary to amputate three toes.

The efforts of the operator of the car, Motorman H. L. Wright, 25, of 134 Eleventh street northeast, to stop were not successful. Police said Mrs. Elliott stepped in front of the car, being unable to see it coming because of the heavy snow.

Boy Slips Under Auto Backing Up; Leg Broken

Slipping from the curbing at Fourteenth and Monroe streets northwest yesterday afternoon, John E. Kane, 12, of 3475 Holmead place northwest, fell into the path of an automobile being backed into a parking place. The lad was struck and suffered a fractured leg.

Tenth Precinct police took the injured boy to Children's Hospital. No charges were placed against the driver, Benedict M. English, 37, of 1872 Newton street northwest. The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kane.

Man, 60, Hurt in Stairs Fall.

Nicholas Chaconas, 60 years old, of 115 E street northwest, received a severe laceration of the scalp when he fell down the stairs of his home. He was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment. His condition is not serious.

CHURCH IS TERMED GREAT DEMOCRACY

All Men Are Equal Before Supreme Being, Declares Bishop Fiske.

Declaring that the Christian Church represented "the Great Democracy," in that it serves rich and poor alike, the Right Rev. Charles Fiske, Bishop of Central New York, preached yesterday morning in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

The bishop said that the depression has produced one cause for deepest thankfulness by drawing closer together men of every class and position in mutual helpfulness to relieve distress and suffering.

"This lesson of the democracy of the Christian Church is what we are learning today," Bishop Fiske said. "Men and women of wealth are rising to the opportunity and privilege of helping the depressed and unemployed. All of us are greatly concerned to bring in a new and more Christian order and make this a better world."

Text of Sermon.

Taking as the text of his sermon the story of the contrasted visit of the shepherds and the three "Kings from the East" to the Christ child in the manger at Bethlehem, Bishop Fiske emphasized that the church is for all kinds of people.

"The Christian Church in Christ's plan, is the great democracy," he said. "If we would make it what He wanted it to be we must make it a place of shepherds and kings, rich and poor, simple and cultured, each anxious to put his heart next to some other man's heart and warm it into a new life."

"The first who came to pay their reverence to Christ were poor shepherds from the pastures of Bethlehem," Bishop Fiske continued. "Then and afterwards it looked as if Jesus was chiefly interested in people pressed by poverty or ignorance. He came to preach the gospel to the poor. His first disciples were plain men of little education. Those who followed Him were peasants from Galilee. It was the common people who heard him gladly.

Poor First Heard Gospel.

"When the gospel was first preached, it made its way among Roman slaves with only here and there the rich and the cultured.

"In Christ's own teaching there are hard words about the insidious peril of riches, not because Christ had no sympathy with men of wealth, but because prosperity inevitably tends toward satisfaction with its own condition and inevitably shuts off from any spiritual perspective, and because riches bring temptations and too often produce fatty degeneration of the moral nature.

"The notion, however, that wealth and culture have no place in Christ's religion is a mistaken idea. Here have come the Epiphany pilgrims with their treasures and wealth and wisdom with them into the presence of allegiance with Christ.

"Soon men of culture enroll themselves under the banner of the Cross. To Jesus Christ men are just men, whether rich or poor. He values them always and exactly for what they are. He loves them for what they may become."

Bishop Fiske is leading a conference at the College of Preachers on "Preaching and Pastoral Care," which is being attended by more than a score of Episcopal clergymen from all sections of the country.

CHURCH DEDICATED BY PRESBYTERIANS

Dr. Stevenson, Princeton Seminary President, Is Heard at Services.

Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, was the principal speaker yesterday afternoon at the dedication services of the Western Presbyterian Church, H street between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets northwest.

The dedicatory program extends through today and tomorrow, with the Rev. Godfrey Chobot, minister of the Sixth Presbyterian Church and moderator, presiding over the services tonight, which is presbytery night. Dr. Joseph Sizoo, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will preach at the service, and Dr. John C. Palmer, of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Henry Wooding, of the Eckington Presbyterian Church, will speak briefly.

Tomorrow night an organ recital will be presented at 8 o'clock under the direction of Miss Charlotte Klein.

At yesterday's service Dr. Stevenson congratulated the congregation of the Western Church on their new church, and made a plea for deeper consecration and interest in world-wide missions. The keys to the church were presented to Edwin C. Brandenburg, president of the board of trustees, by Howard Clements, chairman of the building committee. More than $1,000 was given in the collection yesterday.

Christianity Seen Sought by Trade

Bishop Freeman Declares Slump Has Stressed Business Need.

Among American business leaders there is a rising desire to incorporate in industry and commercial relations the principles taught by Christ, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, declared yesterday morning at St. John's Church, Georgetown, where he preached after administering the rite of confirmation.

"Relating recent conversations with some of the country's captains of industry, the Bishop stated that "the depression had brought about a growing sense of the need of the mingling of religious principles in business as a most potent means of restoring the Nation to normal conditions. He emphasized that the church must take the leadership in accomplishing a new era of human relationships.

The Bishop urged Episcopalians of Washington to participate actively in the unemployment relief program which he recently organized.

C. P. Sisson to Address Bar at Musolit Club

Charles P. Sisson, Assistant Attorney General, and former attorney general of Rhode Island, will address the Washington Bar Association Thursday, according to announcement yesterday by Perry W. Howard, president of the association. The address will be given at the Musolit Club.

The bar association, composed of colored attorneys, will have as their guests members of the Monumental Bar Association, of Baltimore, and administrative heads of the National Negro Bar Association.

CHRISTIANITY TO AID YOUNG PEOPLE HELD WORLD NEED TODAY

Rev. S. W. Moore Points Out That Many Youths Have No Part in Church.

BEGIN WITH CHILDREN, WEST VIRGINIAN URGES

Faith That Recognizes Every Man as Brother Also Declared Urgent.

"We need a Christianity that will enlist young people in the right kind of life and in worth-while service," said the Rev. Samuel W. Moore, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Bluefield, W. Va., preaching yesterday morning at the Church of the Pilgrims on "What Kind of Christianity the World Needs."

"Many young people today have no part in Christianity's plans, programs and purposes," he said. "We need a Christianity that will enlist their interest, sympathy and efforts. We who are Christians need to examine our own hearts and efforts to see if the failure to so enlist the young people is our fault.

"A New York minister recently said: 'We have our choice. We will either support boys' and girls' clubs, summer camps, playgrounds and all the several agencies for children and young people or we will support Sing Sing and other penal institutions.'

Most Important Feature.

"What he says is true, but he failed to mention the most important feature, that is, bringing them to unite with Jesus Christ in a whole-hearted purpose to live worthwhile lives for Him and to serve nobly and heroically and to help their fellow men," Mr. Moore explained.

"We need a Christianity that is broad in its sympathies. There must be no tendency to let people alone who have neglected their opportunities and who have wasted their lives through sin and are down and out. They must have our sympathetic understanding, interest and help. They must be invited to the church and made to feel welcome. If for one reason or another they feel a hesitancy about coming to Christ we must seek in some other way to reach and save them through union gospel missions and the Salvation Army," the speaker declared.

"And even more important than that we need a Christianity that will begin with people in their young and tender years, in the home, Sunday Schools and churches and teach them the right way of life, instilling into their minds and hearts principles of righteousness and moral and spiritual conduct. We must teach them a loyalty to Christ and to Christian ideals, thus building up within them an inner strength and character that will stand the stress and strain of fierce conflict with temptation, in latter years," he said.

Must Provide Outlet.

"We must provide an outlet for their boundless enthusiasm and energy along sane and wholesome lines under proper supervision and direction, lest the devil misdirect this enthusiasm and energy into wicked and destructive channels. We need a saving Christianity in the home, Sunday School and on the playground. Far better to stand on the high lands and direct young lives in the right way than to wait with an ambulance at the foot of the wrong way and try to salvage the wreckage.

"Some one has said that we need a new gospel for the present age, one written on the lives of Christians that the world may see the reality of what we preach.

Cites Need for Faith.

"We need a Christianity which has faith in God, as the Divine Creator, a faith which recognizes that we are His stewards entrusted with time, life and a wealth of opportunity, and accountable unto Him for the use of these. We need a faith that recognizes the fact that we are to administer all these for His glory and for the best interests of mankind, a faith that recognizes in every man a brother in need, a neighbor whom we should love.

"With such a Christianity as that we can readily see how present conditions would never have been brought about. There would have been no World War, with this terrible aftermath and its burdens. If we have such faith there will never be another World War. A disarmament conference would break the swords. With such a faith we would never see a nation like America allow a superabundance of food supplies to go to waste while the people of a nation like China starve to death."

New Yorker, Mind Blank, Appeals to Police for Aid

How he happened to be in Washington and subsequent events following his arrival last Thursday, are all a mystery to Charles Foster, 38 years old of New York City.

Foster appealed to police of the First Precinct last night, after wandering the streets in an effort to regain his memory. He told them that for some time he had been ill at his home in New York, and remembered boarding a train and arriving in Union Station here late Thursday.

As he stepped from the train, Foster told police, he met an old friend, whom he hadn't seen in several years. His friend suggested, he said, that they go to a nearby restaurant for a cup of coffee. They went to a cafe on North Capitol street near the postoffice, and after drinking the coffee, Foster said his mind suddenly went blank.

His friend disappeared, he said, and he wandered the streets for several days unable to remember what had happened. Foster told police that all his money—about $132—and two suitcases containing his clothes, were missing.

When Foster entered the Police Station he was unable to tell his name. Police obtained it from a discharge paper from the Navy in his pocket. After brief questioning, the man was taken to Mount Alto Hospital. He is recovering. He was well dressed, police said, and an effort is being made to locate relatives in New York.
